Foreword

IN choosing a theme for this book, the staff has looked far and wide to obtain something original and different. The result of this search has been the use of Architecture for the main divisions, selecting prominent and striking buildings of Los Angeles and fitting their symbolism to the school activities. We hope the idea of correct building along various lines of work will be apparent to you.

Building for the Future

The decision of the Almanac to make "architecture" the theme of the 1929 Annual embodies a significant idea. Over sixty years ago the great art critic Ruskin wrote, "A great architect must be a great sculptor or painter,—if he is not, he can only be a builder." By gradual stages he who was originally the "chief builder" has become instead the "planner of buildings," the one whose dreams of beauty are embodied in wood and brick and stone by a multitude of workmen.

Very significant to us, then, as students of life, is this term "architect," for in it is justified and glorified the role of the dreamer of dreams even in an age when practical studies and practical arts are especially in favor. I think we will all agree that the man who can envision in all its completed beauty a wondrous cathedral and can prescribe the minutest detail of its construction is worthy of greater honor and emolument than is the contractor who carries out those plans. He must combine in the highest degree beauty of conception with a practical knowledge of materials and structural problems.

Thus the architect encourages us to believe that we have set our feet in the proper pathway when in schools like Franklin High School we strive to build into our four years here as many as possible of the qualities and experiences that go to make up the structure which we call LIFE. Knowledge of the past, a command of at least our mother tongue, a love of the beautiful, a sound body, and understanding heart, the quality of friendliness are quite as essential to our truest happiness as is the mastery of a vocation.

And so may the Almanac by its theme for 1929 remind us to lay our foundation true and firm and strong that upon it may rise in beauty and symmetry the most perfect structure possible,—one that the great Architect of Life may look upon and call good.

CHARLES B. MOORE.

Miss Hodgkins' Message

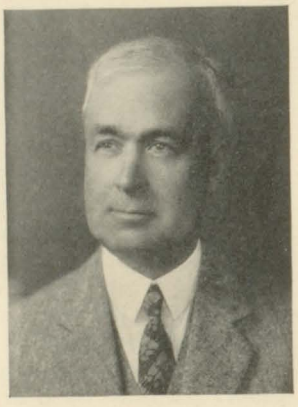

Our formal education is an attempt to give us a technique of living, an ability to choose from the raw materials of life those stones worth building into our social mansions.

Bertrand Russell in his recent book, Education and the Good Life, presents four qualities as worthy aims of education. I offer them to you to be used as foundation stones. The first of these is vitality, which promotes an interest in the outside world, gives power of hard work and safeguards us against envy. Next, he gives courage, developed by things which take us beyond life: love, knowledge, art. The third quality is sensitiveness, a corrective of mere courage. The fourth is intelligence, an aptitude for acquiring knowledge. It requires beliefs in the possibility of knowledge, habits of observation, patience and industry,

With these foundation stones and the cement of intellectual probity, you will build, I am sure, worthy edifices.

EDITH M. HODGKINS.

Mr. Sniffen's Message

For a few brief hours on commencement day the graduate has within his grasp the pot of gold that lies at the end of the rainbow. In it are realized hopes and dreams that have come true. When morning comes he sees far off in the West a brighter rainbow with a larger pot of gold.

Every man has his own philosophy of life whether he known it by that name or not. To it he turns for guidance, for consolation, and for encouragement when he is faced by the perplexities of every day existence. To the members of the Class of S'29 I commend the following. In my opinion it will prove helpful as a guide in times of trouble and will yield both consolation and encouragement.

Believe that in this world everyone receives in the main that to which his talents and his character entitle him. Have faith in the honesty and in the good intentions of your fellow man. Know that one responsibility well carried will usually lead to a larger responsibility. Rest assured that any young man or woman who day after day and year after year does his best will wake up some fine morning in middle life to find that he is not without material possessions and that he has that which is without price, the confidence and respect of his associates. Give to the world your best and at the end of the pathway you will find the pot of gold.

Senior Class of W'29

Many pleasant events have marked the path of the class of Winter, Nineteen Hundred and Twenty-nine. Although at times the road was rough, they soon became so familiar with Franklin and the rules and regulations that few were left behind as graduation time approached.

In their last term together it was found necessary to elect various officers to aid in making the class affairs run smoothly. Great care was taken in the selection of these officers and from the numerous candidates Dale Jones was chosen president. He performed his duties with skill and ease and the class activities were held successfully. Alma Garvin filled the position of vice-president and was an able assistant to Dale. Harriet Birnie as secretary, Robert Blake, treasurer, and Helen Yorston, social chairman, fulfilled their duties admirably and were a pride to the class.

As the time for graduation drew near, the Seniors found themselves looking backward with longing eyes to the happy days and carefree moments they were leaving behind. But ahead lay the future, unexplored, so with hopeful hearts they left the halls of Franklin, knowing they had done their share in holding up the standards of the school.

W'29 Advisors

As faculty advisors the Winter class of Twenty-nine was fortunate in having a representative from every part of the school.

Miss Bernice Banning, chairman of the Senior classroom, is a member of the English department, and she very capably read the bulletins and disposed of classroom business.

Miss Bessie Gill and Mr. Russell W. Edwards are also on the English faculty. Mr. Edwards was kept doubly busy representing the Press and the History department.

The Boys' Physical Education department was present in the form of Mr. Roy Jellison, while Mrs. Eunice Griffin, Latin teacher, reminded the students of the Language department.

As singing plays an important part in the Senior class affairs it proved necessary to have more than one faculty member of the music department. Mr. Desire Gilson, who supervises the orchestra and band, and Miss Eugenia Olive, director of the Glee Clubs, helped the Seniors with their class songs.

Last but not least was Elizabeth Cloud Miller. She is of the Dramatics department and proved invaluable in helping with sweater day and class day, and deportment on graduation night.

These faculty sponsors will long be remembered by the Seniors for their readiness to advise and their help in solving all Senior problems which arose.

Senior Class of S'29

Without doubt the largest and best class of seniors ever gathered together at Franklin assembled in 240 in February to build their castles for June graduation. After much debate and gradual elimination the architects to build the castle were chosen.

Jack Reed was conceded to be the best and most popular of his many opponents. "Bossing" the job was no small task for so large a group of willing workers, but Jack proved himself equal to every task and it is said that no better could be had.

Iwalani Duckworth, as vice-president, ably assisted Jack in every way. Iwalani proved herself indispensable on committees and presided in the absence of his highness, the president.

With much deliberation and careful thought, Cecil Waterbury was selected to keep strict account of all class affairs. We would recommend such an efficient secretary for any Senior Class as large as ours, because they are so rare.

Great pains were taken in selecting someone to collect and care for the large amount of money raised in the process of constructing our castle. John La Fleur kept a complete account of all the vast sums collected from the contributors.

Fearing all work and no play would make so many people less playful, two social chairmen were selected. Marjorie Murray and John Fox provided many good times for the busy builders.

S'29 Advisers

A very capable set of teachers, under the leadership of Mr. Boyd, tried to hold down the enthusiasm of the senior class during the spring semester. Mr. Boyd's "public speaking" voice penetrated the din of C. R. 240 very satisfactorily. Senior A's in general called him a jolly good fellow and wished, if they had not already had him for English, that they might have.

Miss Mallory was attendance keeper and Mr. Boyd's able assistant. Her good judgment was asked for on all difficult occasions.

Miss Pipal took care of all the beginners in the alphabet or rather those whose last name began with A or B. She very willingly gave her time as advisor on committees.

Mr. Beach's quiet presence was much appreciated by section B. Although seen but not heard very often he was always on hand to do his work with good will.

Section C had Miss Philbrook to superintend their behavior. She also led the class in the songs for all occasions.

We were sorry to lose Mr. Gilson as class teacher for part D, but were very fortunate to get Mrs. Minkler to fill the vacancy.

Mr. Oneal gave his time, good nature, and ability very generously, while Miss Kennedy and Mrs. Hahn very efficiently carried out the duties assigned to them.

The class teachers would not be complete without Mrs. Miller. Under her direction the class marched through graduation with perfect ease. No better set of senior teachers ever directed such a large classroom.

Prairie

Afternoon

Across the wide level of the afternoon prairie
I saw the shining corn wave, richly yellow.
Barns of planked wood, brown from wind and sun
Grew from the earth. Long mellowed time,
The laughter and the joy of gatherings
Had given them a kindly, large-lived look.
Rambling frame houses,
Not built in smug content like city homes,
Held hospitality. There on the prairie soil
Everything was mellowed, softened, kind,
With sunshine ages old, and cleansing air.

Within the prairie town the children played,
Along broad gravel paths beneath high oaks,
Their shadows growing long as evening fell.
Deep dim porches thick with vines
Of crimson stains and golden, yielded the glory
Of their autumn colors to the fiery sun
Before it sank. The windows gleamed
Like gold. The trees waved darkly
As the wind rose, cool, high and higher
In the blue-grey veil of autumn—
Like pig-iron smoke—a bluish-grey
Shot with gold. Shadows of leaves danced
In the half dusk. Again the wind stirred through.

On the thin black horizon line came
A light like that one sees in tigers' eyes,
Yellow on the rim. Round and yellow,
The moon came and sat on the edge of the prairie,
So near that one could walk into it from his home—
So the little children always thought.

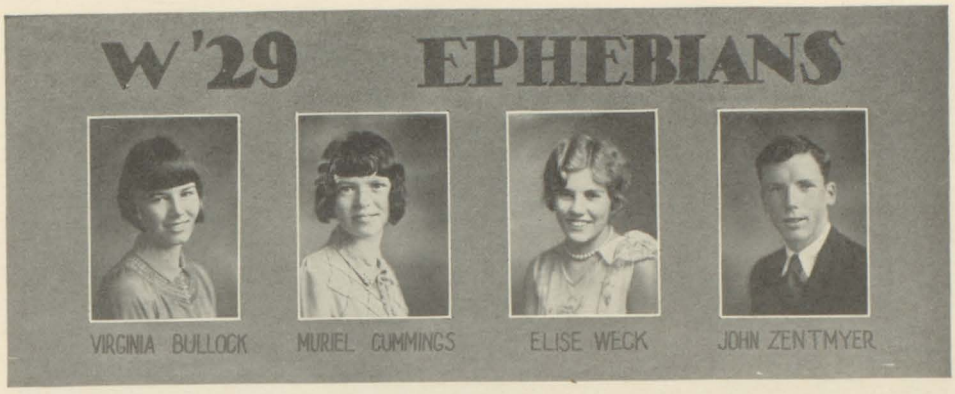

May Peterson.

Shopping

A thin little moon
Touches eucalyptus lace
With a critical finger;
Holds it up to light,
The sunset light,
Above the dark hill.
The thin little moon is laughing
And pulling the lace,
The black eucalyptus lace,
Over her face.
She wasn't really going to buy it
—She was just pretending.
She'll go in a minute
And price the charming jewels
Sometimes called the stars.
She may buy a tiny cloud
For a scarf
And then go home.

Louise Rasor.

Scholarship
V·JAMENTZ '29

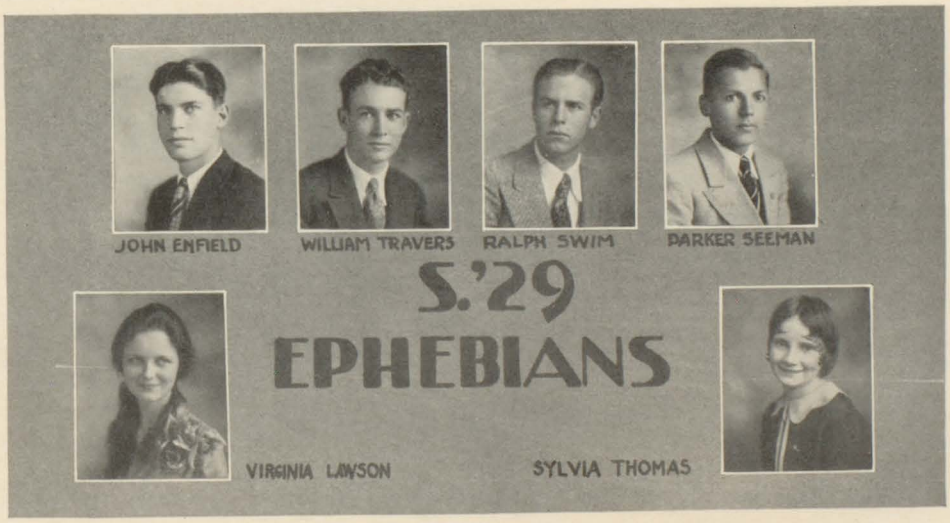

Ephebians

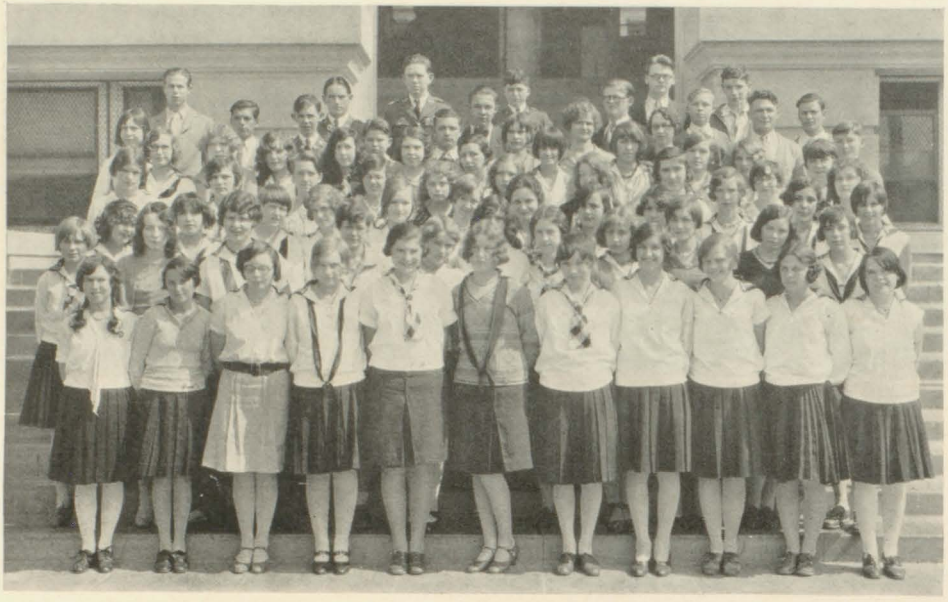

At the end of every semester the faculty chooses from the Senior Class one Ephebian for every forty students in the class. Those honored ones are chosen because of their scholarship, popularity and participation in school activities.

In the winter class those distinguished were Virginia Bullock, Muriel Cummings, Elise Weck and John Zentmeyer.

From the summer class were chosen six new members, namely: John Enfield, William Travers, Ralph Swim, Parker Seeman, Sylvia Thomas and Virginia Lawson.

These Ephebians will join those from other High Schools in a City League, whose purpose is civic betterment.

Tetralpha

The Tetralpha or Honor Club of Franklin is one of the oldest, largest and most enterprising clubs in this institution. The officers for the fall terms were as follows: President, Virginia Bullock; vice-president and social chairman, Maxine Martin; secretary, Muriel Cummings; and treasurer, Marguerite Searle. During the spring term the "Wise Owls" prospered under the leadership of Florence Van Wert as president; Sylvia Thomas, vice-president and social chairman; Stella Soroker, secretary; and Madge Schwartz, treasurer.

Great enthusiasm was provoked among the Tetralphas and the entire Student Body by the semi-annual Tetralpha aud call given during the fall term, consisting of Mr. Callahan and his Indian friends from the Indian Village, who proved to be exceptionally talented entertainers. Mr. Callahan presented a copy of his book, "The Heart of an Indian," to Virginia Bullock, president, and another to Marguerite Searle, who drew the lucky number.

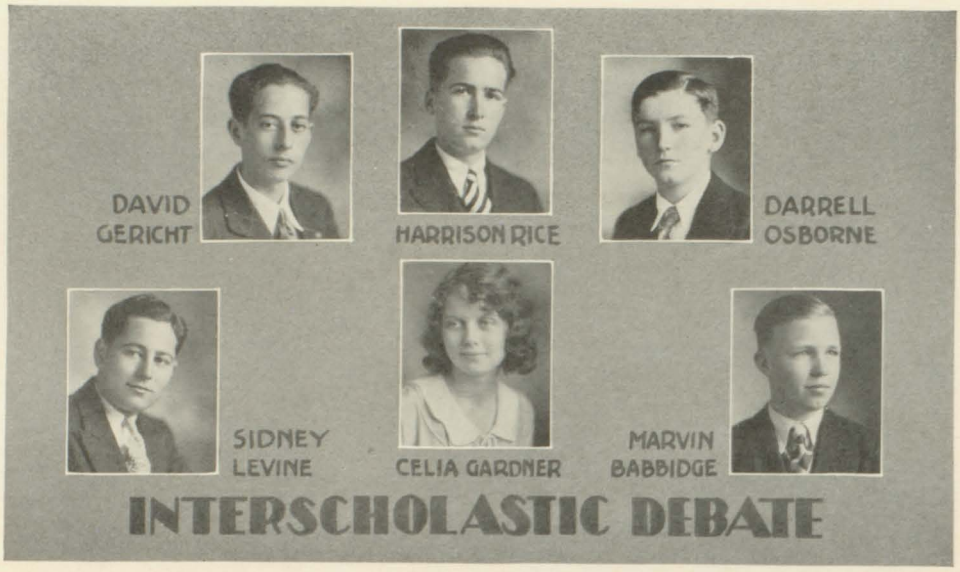

Interclass Debate

It speaks well for our school to have a good support for debating.

During the last year, the Junto Club has evolved a timely system of debating. This system of interclass debate has a representative team for both sides of the question, comprising the Gold and the Silver teams. The speeches for the contestants for places on these teams are judged by two factors: argument and delivery. The two students who are considered the best by the judges are given places on the Gold team, while those ranking second are placed on the Silver team. When the teams are picked, the members set about to work on their questions.

In these contests the decision is rested on four main points: constructive speech, delivery, refutation, and teamwork. As a reward for their efforts, the members of the Gold team are presented with gold pins, and in addition their names are engraved upon an impressive loving cup.

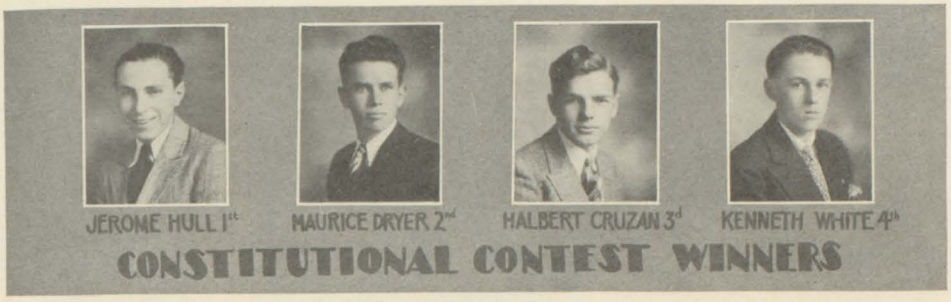

Interscholastic Debate

Debating this year has been in the hands of two able coaches drafted from our faculty, Mr. Boyd and Mr. Beach. Franklin belongs to the city debating league, which is composed of eight major high schools. The league carries on a system of debates which provides for two teams from each school during the semester to engage in league debates. All debates are of a dual nature, which means that each school sends out an affirmative and negative team to debate the same question on the same day. The questions for debate in the city league during the past year have been designed particularly to appeal to an audience that have followed more or less the trend of public thought and discussion.

We started the season with but two interscholastic debators back, Celia Gardner and Sidney Levine. The two had previously been colleagues. The new debators, who have given much thought and time to the advancement of Franklin, are David Gericht, Darryl Osborn, Marvin Babbidge and Harrison Rice.

The only thing left to regret from this past season has been the fact that two members of our team are graduating this June. With the experienced material left, though, and the fine material developing in the interclass series, Franklin should return to her glory as the city debating champion.

Oratorical Contest of the Constitution

The final of the sixth national Constitutional contest was held in Washington, D. C., on May 25. At that time Ben Swofford of Kansas City, Missouri, was chosen as the best orator in the United States. He selected for his subject "The American Constitution and Its Framers."

The general public has shown an increasing interest in the contest each year since it was started by the Los Angeles Times, the leading newspaper of this city, six years ago. And we may well be proud that a newspaper of our own city has started such a splendid educational movement.

Our city has also taken a very active part in the individual contests each year; Don Tyler, of our own school, having won the national contest six years ago and a boy from Hollywood High School having won the contest two years later.

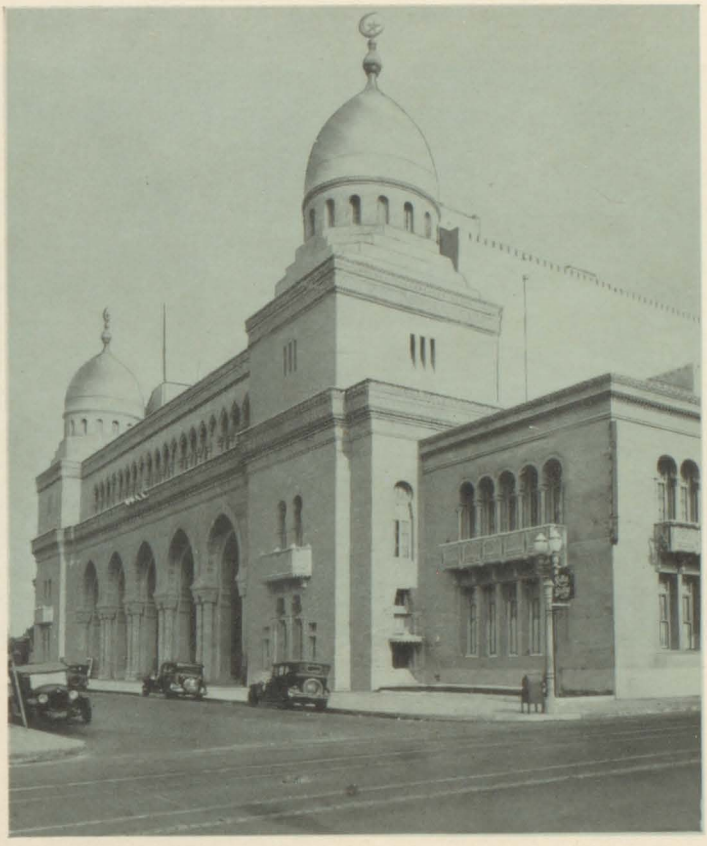

Eight boys and four girls entered the contest at Franklin this year, and after much preparation, the first elimination contest was held. From the twelve competing, the four best speakers were chosen and these competed for the honor of representing our school in an aud call, one week later.

Jerome Hull was the winner of first place with his oration on "The Foundation of the Constitution." Maurice Dryer, second place, spoke on "The Origin and Development of the Constitution" and Halbert Cruzan, third, spoke on "The Age of Opportunity." Kenneth White was the fourth speaker.

Jerome very ably represented us in the city contest. This contest was won, however, by Leonard Rorwitz of Los Angeles High School, who later won the distinction of being the California representative in the Pacific Coast finals.

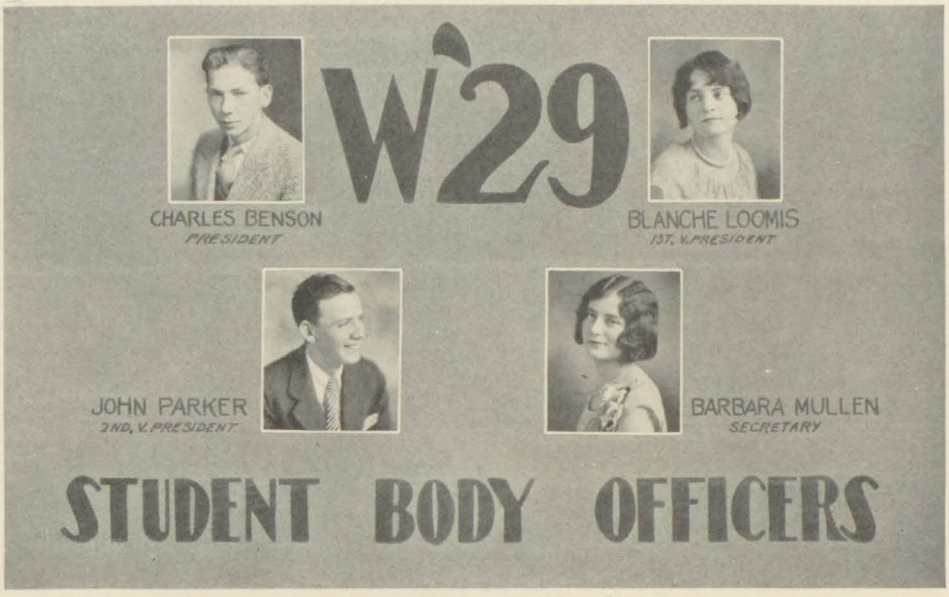

The fourth international contest will be held this coming fall, at which time our United States representative will compete with representatives from foreign countries for the world championship.

We hope the interest in this worthwhile subject will steadily grow in Franklin.

Student Body Officers for W'29

There is much to be taken into consideration each term in the selection of student Body officers. The Student Body chose wisely and well when it elected Charles Benson to the highest office in the school, that of Student Body president.

Charles has a lot of executive ability and he made his term in office a successful one. He had charge of one aud call a week, and planned such interesting programs that every student was pleased. Charles also presided over the Student Council meetings and was active and prominent in many other activities of the school.

As first vice-president, Blanche Loomis was called upon to take charge of the Girls' Self-Government and to aid on the Citizenship Credit Board. Her sense of justice and fair decisions won her many friends from among those who appeared before her and many were the regrets when she left Franklin.

John Parker, former leader of yells, worked with Blanche as second vice-president. His duties consisted of supervising the Boys' Self-Government and rendering decisions on Citizenship cases. John worked hard and proved a pride to the school.

Barbara Mullin filled the position of secretary so well that sufficient credit cannot be given her. By many this office is not considered difficult,but it takes ability and brains to master the Student Body books. Barbara's task was hard and she did it well.

At the end of this successful term the Student Body felt justified in having placed its faith in these students and it was with regret that it watched them leave.

Student Body Officers for S'29

As the time drew near for the election of new Student Body officers, the question arose as to who was to lead the school for the coming term. One person stood above all others in point of service, and it was on that person, John Parker, that the honor of being Student Body president was bestowed.

John had just finished a successful term as second vice-president and there was little doubt in anybody's mind as to his ability for a bigger job. He didn't desert his backers, and his hearty co-operation and spirit of good will helped to make the school affairs run smoothly.

Mildred Hough successfully took over the office of first vice-president and soon had the Girls' Self-Government started. Her judgment on Citizenship Credit cases was fair and just, and she won a place in the hearts of the students.

Frank Doyle, new second vice-president, worked with Mildred on the Citizenship cases and also took care of his work, that of Boys' Self-Government. Having served several terms as a special Self-Government officer, Frank was quite capable of leading the boys and getting the best out of them.

The least important Student Body office from the students' point of view, but the hardest to manage, is that of secretary, and the secretarial ability of Leona Ware made her a fitting person for that position. She took the minutes of Student Council meetings and kept the big Student Body books in perfect order, thus earning for herself the name of a loyal and dependable Franklin student.

Once more the time came for the offices to be passed on and new faces and new ideas took the place of the outgoing officers, who left a successful term behind them.

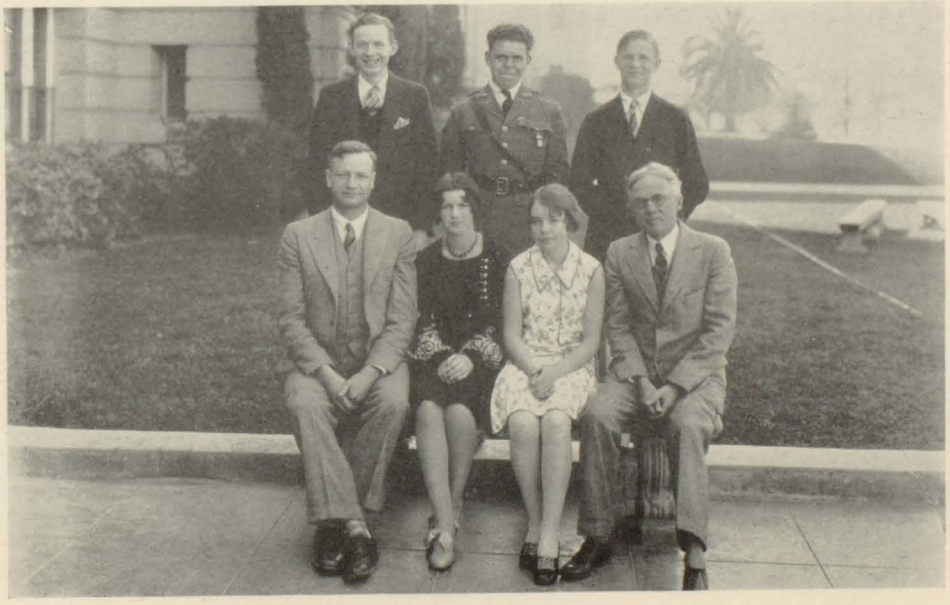

Student Council

Solving the problems of the Student Body is the business of the Student Council. This group is made up of representative students from each of the classes and major activities of the school.

Board of Finance

All matters concerning the expenditure of Student Body money must be brought before those students known as the Board of Finance. John Hess, business manager of the school during the fall term, and Raymond Sayles of the summer term, had charge of the meetings. Mr. Moore and Mr. Shaw were back of them on all questions.

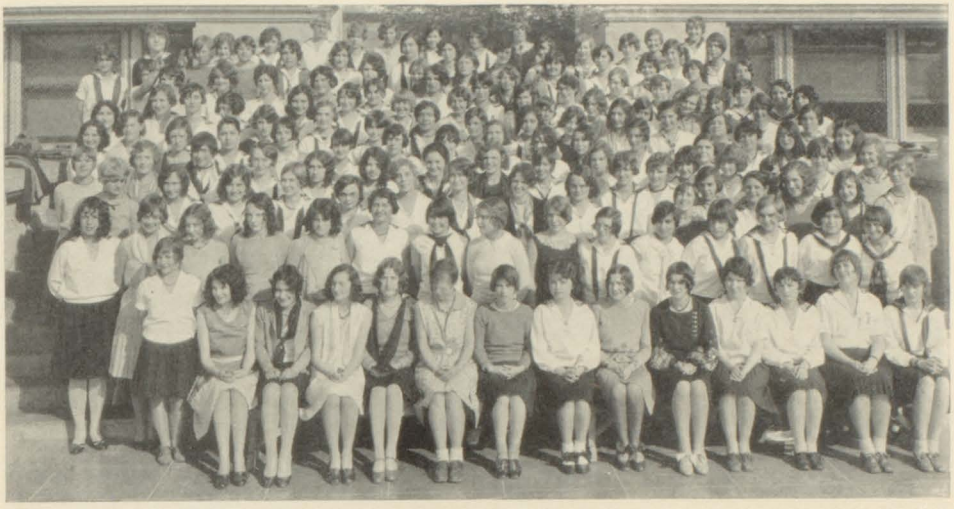

Citizenship Credit Boards

Edith Owen and Gerald McClellan as Citizenship Credit Board chairmen had the unpleasant task of removing credits from the records of their fellow students during the spring term. In the winter term, Jean Hardesty and Mary Rose Swearengen were chairmen of the board. They were assisted by the vice-presidents of the Student Body and their work greatly added to the government of the school. Mrs. Watson was the other judge on the court during both spring and fall terms.

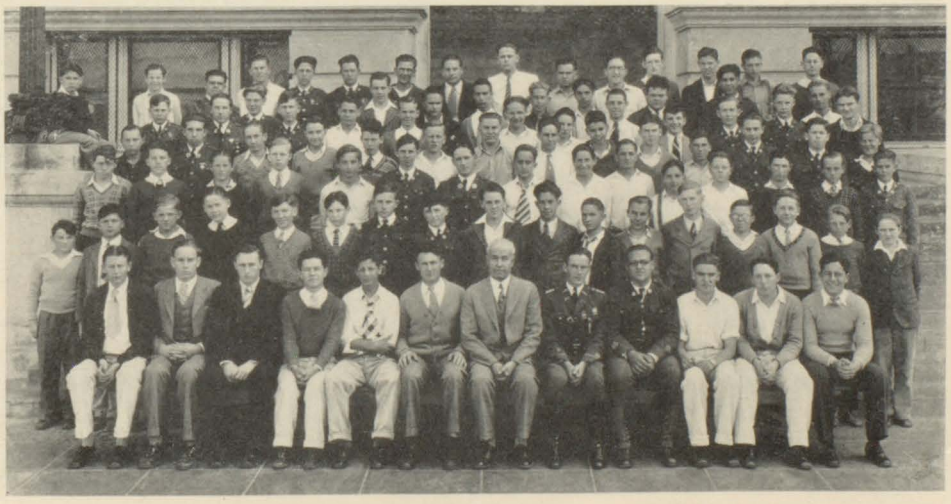

Girls' Self-Government

Enforcing the rules made by the students is the work of the Girls' Self-Government officers. They are chosen by the first vice-president of the Student Body and are assigned special work to do. During the fall term these girls were led by Blanche Loomis. Mildred Hough, assisted by Jean Conn, took over the work in the spring term.

Boys' Self-Government

In the keeping of the halls clean and quiet, the Boys' Self-Government officers are a great help around Franklin. Under the leadership of the second vice-president of the Student Body, this organization cultivates loyalty and co-operation among the students. John Parker and Frank Doyle were in charge during the past year.

Girls' League Officers

Every girl in school is a member of the Girls' League, but its guidance is left to the care of several capable young ladies. Gladys Owen was elected president for the fall term with Carmen Strahl, vice-president; Winnie Haysom, social chairman; Marjorie Brewer, treasurer; and Rhea Hardesty, secretary.

During the spring term the Girls' League work was carried on by Winnie Haysom as president, Lou Brown, vice-president, Sylvia Thomas, secretary, Mary Bernice Dunlap, social chairman, and Florence Bryant, treasurer.

Girls' League Yell Leaders

Proving indisputably the fact that girls can yell, the members of the Girls' League fairly raised the roof at the League aud calls held during the year. Under the peppy leadership of Florence Bryant, Carol Lea and Louise Washburn, the yells were put over in good style.

In the spring term, Lovell Van Meter, Jorie Casebeer, and Frankie Hughes took over the positions of cheer queens. With their advent into office many new yells were introduced to the responsive audiences.

Music

When Ugli courted Uglia
His wild shouts rent the air.
He beat upon a crude skin drum
And dragged her by the hair.

More formal was the knight of old
In wooing lovely maid;
He softly strummed upon his lyre
A moonlight serenade.

When Grandpa called on Grandmama,
Quite bright was he and clever;
He sang and played on his guitar
And vowed he'd love her ever.

The modern Youth has banjo-ukes,
And drums and saxophones,
But sentiment is present still
In jazz that shrieks and moans.

Boys' Senior Glee Club

Well up in the score of popularity among organizations at Franklin is the Boys' Senior Glee Club.

The officers during the spring semester were: Ray Hebert, president; John Parker, vice-president; Paul Hamilton, secretary-treasurer.

Orpheus Club

The Orpheus Club, or the Boys' Junior Glee Club, keeps interest in musical matters alive among the boys.

For the summer term the officers were: President, Joe Signorelli; vice-president, Paul Maher; secretary, Bertelle Knowles; treasurer, Howard Prewitt.

Girls' Senior Glee Club

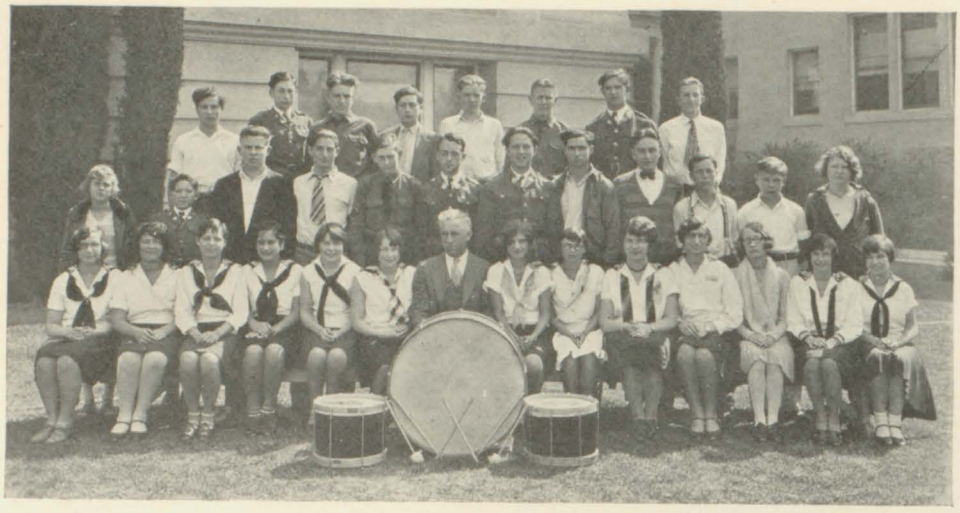

One of the most useful and tuneful of all the clubs in school is the Girls' Senior Glee Club. The past two terms Blanch Loomis and Leona Ware have been the presidents; Helen Mae MacNary and Evelyn Hall, vice-presidents and social chairman; Lucile Reed, Lorretta Church, secretaries; June Chandler, Barbara Cortelyou, treasurers; Elise Weck, Valda Carling, librarians, with Leona Ware and Frances Allen as assistants.

TREBLE CLEF CLUB

As well as adding to the interest in music in Franklin, the Treble Clef Club gives the girls splendid training for the Senior Glee Club.

The past term officers were: President, Betty Tassie; vice-president, Alice Pargellis; secretary, Nita Lawrence; treasurer, Eleanor Pierce; librarian, Beulah Wagner.

Senior Orchestra

Under the leadership of Mr. Gilson, the Senior Orchestra had a most successful year. They have provided music for almost every school entertainment, among which were Aud Call, Commencement, and all of the plays put on by the Dramatic department and Alumni Masquers. In many ways the orchestra has done its part in helping the school in most of its activities. The officers for the past year were: president, Dorothy Cushman; vice-president, Whip McClay; social chairman, Anna Bilach; and secretary, Eleanor Perry.

Literature

Oh bring to us
  The joys of tune,
An ancient song
  And a mystic rune,
Poetry's charm
  And the love of rhyme,
Down from the ages
  And up from time;

Tradition and legend
  And dim sweet lays,
Relics of past
  And dream veiled days,
Hidden in a lute
  And its fragile rhyme,
Down through the ages
  And up from time;

Stories told
  Of ancient days,
Drama's art
  And comic plays,
An odd new poem
  With a rollicking rhyme,
Down through the ages
  And up from time.

Almanac Staff

Now that we have written something about everything, we are going to hand ourselves some big bouquets. One of the most interesting features of an annual is the staff. The Almanac Staff for this year is no exception. We shall prove this statement by revealing to our public the true greatness of our personnel.

First and foremost among these intellectuals is the Hon. Ralph Swim, an enterprising safe-cracker, hi-jacker and racketeer, and as a side-line, Editor-in-Chief of the Almanac. Ralph has ably demonstrated his talent for passing his write-ups on to other members of the staff, and demanding "more copy and hurry up with it!" In moments of mental stress, he often astonished all hearers with his fluent command of English, etc.

Here is Mrs. Wise, faculty advisor in charge of the Almanac; she proved herself wondrous Wise in this work. Next in line is Mr. Shaw. He distinguished himself in handling the financial affairs. Miss Kirk directed the art work very competently.

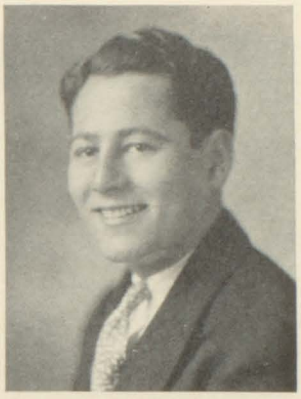

Leona Ware, as Literary Editor, read reams of our copy cheerfully and competently even after it was long over-due, and she did many write-ups herself. Let's give this little girl a big hand.

Here is Marguerite Decker, one of the Assistant Editors. This exclusive photograph is the result of months of skillful tracking around the Press Office. Marguerite's experience on the Press made her a valuable member of the staff.

Our other Assistant Editor was Emily Gault, who has written up so many clubs that it has become a habit. At times she would read Scotch jokes while in the Almanac office and laugh loudly until extinguished.

Almanac Staff

In continuing with our honor roll, we find in a very high place Sidney Levine, Business Manager de luxe. He was so successful in this field that he was able to make both ends meet and still have enough left over to tie into a big bow.

All the art was put through by Vahey Jamentz, who worked hard despite his conviction that the Almanac would be out several months too soon. Vahey is quite the optimist.

Dave Lackie gave a very satisfactory interpretation of Managing Editor. At times he managed to extend clear across the office so that it was impossible to avoid tripping over his feet. He was happiest when he could use the telephone and try to silence the staff.

Lester Ford was a very competent Sports Editor, and any complaint should be addressed to him. The complainant will probably be rewarded with either a black eye or with one of "Red's" famous "sunset unlimited" blushes. And, after all, who would ask for more?

Dorothy Silverberg has found out what happens to people who get their own copy in too early. Alas! extra work is found for them.

Much of the typing fell to Cecile Waterbury, who performed her task very skillfully.

At this time the Staff wishes to thank Phil de Lara for his work on the cartoons and calendar; and also to thank John Parker and Jack Watson, who helped secure advertising.

And now, when the Almanac Staff broadcasting over Station FHS signs off, this write-up will be exactly one week late, by Crock and Company's barometer.

James Speedie
Editor-in-Chief

Another year successfully passed with press editions issued on regular schedule. The enjoyment students obtain from its very interesting pages compensates for the hard labor on the part of the editors.

For the past year two very able editors and many willing workers have accomplished their tasks with unusual success.

Aided by a staff of exceptional talent, John Zentmyer edited the Press during the fall semester. His fine work as editor-in-chief was highly praised by all who read the paper. Helen Virginia Lee assisted John in a way that could not be excelled.

Henrietta Morrison acted as Associate Editor, while Marguerite Decker held the position of News Editor, assisted by Charles Poor. The difficult job of Sport Editor fell into the hands of William Cunningham, who, with the assistance of Iwalani Duckworth, Jerome Hull, Vahey Jamentz and William Jones, did an exceptionally good piece of work. Virginia Bullock was none other than Municipal Editor; Marguerite Searle, assistant; Ethel Payne, Feature Editor; Dwight Crandall and Philip De Lara, Cartoonists.

Although the staff did much hard work in writing for the Press, they alone could not edit it. Publicity was not characteristic of the modest people who contributed articles, so a business staff was chosen.

For the first term the task of Advertising and Business Manager were very efficiently taken care of by James Speedie, who worked as fast as his name implies. He was assisted by Ross Worsley. William Jones was Circulation Manager, with Harry Morely and John Hutchinson to assist him.

After many long and tedious hours of work new managers were chosen to carry on their good work. The spring term staff included Ross Worsley, Business and Advertising Manager; Richard Key, Circulation Manager; and Mary Bishopp, Office Manager.

Enough can not be said of Mr. Edwards' fine work as Faculty Advisor of the Press, and to him belongs much credit for the fine work of the past year.

Franklin Press Staff

In the Spring term Marguerite Decker was chosen Editor-in-Chief and made as great a success at the job as John. Assisting Marguerite in the Editorial Department were Jean Miller, Patsy Morton and Virginia Turkington. Pauline Berner acted as Feature Editor assisted by Paul Maher, Phil De Lara and Dwight Crandall.

Vahey Jamentz succeeded Bill Cunningham as Sport Editor and with the assisttance of Jerome Hull, Iwalani Duckworth and others made the sports the most important feature of the Press.

Among the many editions of the paper this past year was a page in color at Christmas time which created a great deal of interest. The Cub edition, edited by the Journalism Class with Tom Shields as Editor-in-Chief was one of the most interesting of the year.

Everyone, even those who were unfortunate enough not to subscribe, had a good laugh over the joke edition, which was by far the best ever put out by any staff.

The King of the Night

Over the purple mountains
  Where daylight's glory falls,
Guiding the deepened twilight
  Where the wondering woodland calls,
King of the Night is speaking
  In a voice that is sad and low,
King of the Western Sunsets
  Where the evening shadows go.
The sceptre he carries is shadow,
  A shadow, so dark and long:
His robe is unending darkness;
  His voice is a plaintive song
Like that of a dying human.
  The trees of the forest cry,
And they wail and they moan in anguish,
  As the King goes marching by.
On his head is a golden crescent,
  And the wood doves softly croon,
A beautiful golden crescent,—
  The crest of the gleaming moon.
O'er the lake he leaves the darkness,
  His stars follow his feet.
He bows his head as in sorrow
  The hills of the world to meet.
He moves to the purple mountain
  And there he draws his dark,
He falls in the mercies of sunrise
  And humbles himself to the lark.
In the night no power could tame him,
  Then he had perfect sway;
But now, as he goes up the mountain,
  He approaches the portals of day.
He falls as if exhausted,
  When the Sun King mounts his throne;
The sun rides high in the heavens
  And leaves the Night King alone.

NELDA INSLEE.

Lyric—Wild Rose

In woodland haunts
  By woodland streams,
In grassy nooks
  Where sunlight gleams,
    You grow.

By rushing rill
  In quiet glade;
Gay loveliness—
  By God you're made.

Sea Madness

When the sun is a Chinese lantern
And sets in the rainbow West,
When the rainbow West
Is a Spanish shawl
With wind cut clouds for a fringe,
When the sea is all swirling gold lace,
All diamond blue and gray—
Then I always put on my Peter Pan Cap
And rush into the echoing sea.
And I hang my cap on a mist blown cloud
And I ride on a wind swept wave,
And sing and sing to the blue domed sky,
And the blue sings back to me.
I laugh and laugh to the rainbow West,
And the West laughs back to me;
I shout and shout to the rushing sea
And the sea shouts back to me.
I pin my hair with a handful of stars
Pulled down from the dusky sky—
And there's nobody there to see or hear,
But my Peter Pan Cap and I.
So when the sun is a Chinese lantern
And sets in the rainbow West,
When the sea is all swirling gold lace,
And diamond blue and gray—
Then I put on my Peter Pan Cap
And ride on a wind swept wave.

Marching Feet

By Dorothy Pierce

Margot was a serving girl in the inn where we were staying. She was beautiful, in her quiet way, but one could see, too, that she had suffered much. You will understand when I repeat to you the story that she told us that last evening.

We were sitting on the tiny veranda just at dusk, my journalist friend and I, chatting with the other guests about the aftermath of the great war. A natural subject, since the Armistice had been signed scarcely a year before.

Suddenly someone suggested that Margot tell us some of her war experience. So we sent for her to come out to us. At first she seemed oddly reluctant, and would have courteously excused herself and slipped away into the inn. But then we heard the voice of Paul, the gardener, speaking quietly from the shadows.

"Tell them, Margot," he said, "tell them of Grandpère."

Margot did not move. She seemed to see no one; her gaze was fixed on something quite far away. Then, in a low, clear voice, she began to speak.

"But it was thus, Messieurs," she told us simply, "Grandpère and I had lived all of our lives in St. Fleury, a little village only a few kilometers from Rheims. We were very happy there until the war, in spite of Grandpère's blindness. I always used to see things for him, mon chèr petit Grandpère—"

She paused a moment, and clasped her thin hands tightly together. No one stirred, and at length she went on.

"One day—there was talk in the village of a great German attack on Rheims. You must know, Messieurs, that Rheims, with its so glorious cathedral and its multitude of great buildings, was, to our simple peasant folk, the most wonderful thing in all our country. It did not seem to us that even a very wicked enemy could seek to destroy that which was so beautiful. But while we wondered, many "poilus" came marching through our little village. They told us en passant that it was indeed a truth, that our city of Rheims was truly in terrible peril. And soon the "poilus" had all passed on, and we were left alone.

"We could not help the city, Messieurs. We were only a handful of women and children and tired old men. But we could pray. And oh! le bon Dieu knows how then we prayed that help might come to Rheims before it was too late, and that our own small village might be delivered from the terrors of war. But after a while our prayers were all said, and still the huge guns boomed and roared over beyond the hills."

"Grandpère sat all day on his worn bench in the fireplace, while I stood by the open window, telling him as best I could what our people were doing in the village.

" 'Margot,' he said suddenly to me, one day when the guns were very, very loud, and the village folk were terrified, "if only the so wonderful "Yanks" might pass this way! One hears that they are coming soon, that they are even now on some of the battle-fields. But none are here, and our brave "poilus" are very tired."

"And then, Messieurs, when the little Grandpère had but scarcely finished speaking, I looked again from the window and beheld a mounting cloud of dust, far down the village street, and knew it must be soldiers. I said nothing to Grandpère, only watched, for I wished to describe them to him as they should pass our window. But Grandpère was before. He started suddenly to his feet, and his old face was full of joy.

" 'Marching feet!' he cried in a loud voice to me. 'You hear the marching feet, Margot? And they are not the French! I hear them drawing near, petite. I must salute them as they pass.'

"He was very, very old, mon cher petit Grandpère, and I had to help him to the window, where he stood stiffly at salute while the marching men went by beneath our window. He was quite beautifully happy, waiting for me to tell him how the so brave Americans appeared. But it could not be so, Messieurs. He was too old, too tired. And with a soft prayer to le bon Dieu for our deliverers, he sank down beside the window there and died. I stood beside him many moments, trying to realize that he had gone from me forever. I could not think, nor see him for my tears. And then I looked out upon the marching men, and was glad that he had gone so quickly, and not knowing. For they were Germans in the street, Messieurs—only Germans, the first to come to St. Fleury—but not, le bon Dieu knows, the last."

The girl's story, told so beautifully, so simply, stirred us all deeply. One by one we stole into the house, and no one spoke.

Some half hour later, as I opened my shutter to admit the cool night breeze, I saw them, Margot and Paul, still sitting quietly where we had left them, looking away into the shadows.

Secrets of the Night

By Marguerite Decker

The car lurched to one side. "Oh, heck." Peter turned to glare at me. "A flat tire. This is a keen time of night to have one."

"Well, it's not my fault. You needn't look at me as if I planned it." I was tired, too. At two o'clock in the morning things don't look so optimistic. We had driven to a distant country club dance and were going through town on our way home.

The brilliantly lighted street gave no indications of life, and the theater crowd had gone long ago. At the end of the block, a red sign announced "Auto Park."

"Maybe the man in the auto park will change it for you."

Peter muttered some unintelligible words and shifted with a groan. The car started slowly down the street. As we turned into the auto park it creaked and sighed.

"Yes, sir. Have it changed for you in a minute." The shriveled up little man beside the car rubbed his hands together with unnecessary zeal.

I squeezed Peter's arm. "Darling, he looks like a wicked magician, doesn't he?" I whispered.

Peter merely grunted and I suddenly doubted my rash promise to marry him. Anybody who couldn't stand a little trouble, well — I was disturbed by low singing. Turning my head I saw coming alongside the car two neatly dressed young men. They paid no attention to each other, but just swung along with their overcoats over their arms. Going the length of the auto park, they turned to their left at an almost invisible alley in the back.

I was about to say something to Peter when I noticed he was breathing rather heavily. I bit my lip to keep back the outburst that came to my lips. How romantic! Engaged two weeks and my fiancé asleep.

A grey shadow slipped past me. In the light from a far window I saw it was a guardian of the law. He crouched forward and hurried to the alley, where he stood a minute looking up and down and then turned to the right. If he was trying to catch those young men, he was on the wrong track, I mused.

"Darling, we must hurry." It seemed a whisper of my imagination, but no—

a young woman slipped past the car, her hand stretched back toward a breathless man. They ran down the narrow lot, dodging mud puddles and holes and turned to the left in the suddenly interesting alley.

I sat up with renewed interest. Was this a show and that hidden alley the stage? I looked at the man, busy fixing the tire, apparently oblivious of the strange happenings.

Looking again toward the grey shadows, I was in time to see an old lady emerge at the right of the alley. There was something peculiar about her. What was it?—why—she was holding an open umbrella above her head although the sky was cloudless and a young moon shone. She strode along until she disappeared from view behind a building. Almost immediately the young woman and the man were running from the alley again and they passed me with a little swirl of wind.

"Beg pardon, ma'am, but the tire's changed."

I came to myself with a jerk and shook Peter. He grumblingly paid the man and we were soon speeding home. I tried to tell him about it, but he laughed and said I was probably asleep, but still I wonder what it was all about. Will it always remain just another of the secrets of the night?

She Knows Her Architecture

She thinks a flying buttress is a lady steward on an air-transport plane, and that listerine is a gargoyle, but she says she's simply giddy about architecture. She says there's something so solid about it. She should know all about solid things.

When I asked her if she could understand a blueprint, she said certainly, she could read any color print so long as it was in English.

She claims her chief joy, when abroad, is wandering through the Cathedral of Rheims. She says she thinks it's an awfully good name for it because she's thought of more excellent rhymes in its "quiet piety"—those are her words. Oh, yes! She writes poetry, too. She says architecture inspires her, that there's no place like a church for peace and concentration. She was about to recite some of her verse when I led her back to architecture.

I asked her if she cared for the modern trend in skyscrapers and she said she thought they were "cute." "Too cute for words" was the way she summed it up.

She thinks a set-back is a relapse, that girders hold up sox, and that a rivet is French for a small river.

She says she thinks a girl should know all about how a house is built if she ever expects to run one. "You know, just like driving an auto." She must be a swell housekeeper. And what a chauffeur! —JUDGE.

Drama

The drama's cycle first began
'Way back in ancient days
When Greek and Roman playwrights wrote
Some festive three-day plays.

But folks soon had to make plays short;
Time hurried by so fast
They found they had to speed things up
Or they'd be in the past.

And now the cycle's turned again,
STRANGE INTERLUDE's revived,
A novel thing to modern folk,
The five hour play's arrived!

So, will we soon be back again
To ancient Roman days?
And will they then be bringing back
Those festive three-day plays?

Dramatic Activities

The Advanced Dramatic classes, under the able direction of Mr. McManus, presented two charming productions, namely, "Pomander Walk" and "The Swan."

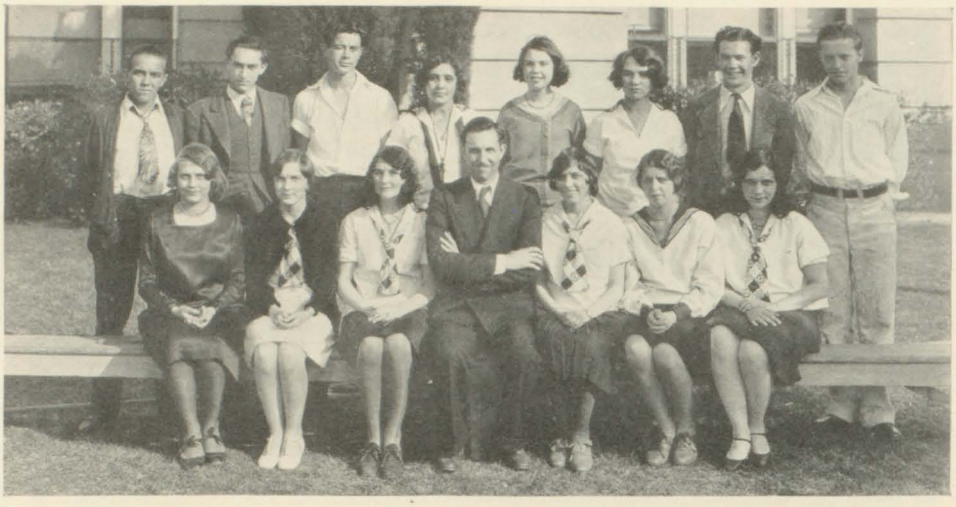

In the fall "Pomander Walk" was presented. The leading characters were played by Dorothy Bell, Rosalee Schwarzkophf, Dwight Crandall, Belden Wood, Jack Black, Virginia Harris, Charles Benson, Jean Hall, Dwight Powers, Helen Peak, Frances Selecman, Bill Georgeson, and Richard Van Curen.

During the spring term a most delightful play, "The Swan," was presented by a very talented cast including Marjorie Murray and Dorothy Bell as Alexandra; Annette Arp and Ruth Zimmerman, Princess Beatrice; Father Hyacinth, Ben Augustine; Symphrosa, Ella Gimble and Charlotte Evans; Prince Albert, Dwight Crandall; Caesar, Bill Georgeson; Princess Maria Dominica, Sadie Kravitz; and Count Wunderlich, Kenneth Hartzell.

This year the Shakespeare study class gave an unusual and delightful interpretation of "Midsummer Night's Dream." Under the splendid direction of Mrs. Elizabeth Cloud Miller the production was a big success. The main charactors were very cleverly played by John Cruzan as Thesus; Ella Gimbal, Hippolyta; Jane Goodale, Hermia; Jane Ellen Anderson, Helena; James Clapper, Lysander; Louis Bader, Demetrius. Many lovely fairies added to the beauty, and the rustics helped the comedy.

Art

A slim white statue
'Gainst a blue black curtain,
An amber orchid sun
And a green gold sea,

A modernistic painting
With brass bold lines
The rhythmic grace
Of a Greek gay frieze.

The play of shadow
On a mauve moth's wing,
The lilt of a mocking bird's
Musical mirth;
The sway of the branches
Of a sylph straight tree
The dash of rain
To a wind wild earth .

The laugh of a child
From a youth young heart,
Those who interpret,
They call it Art.

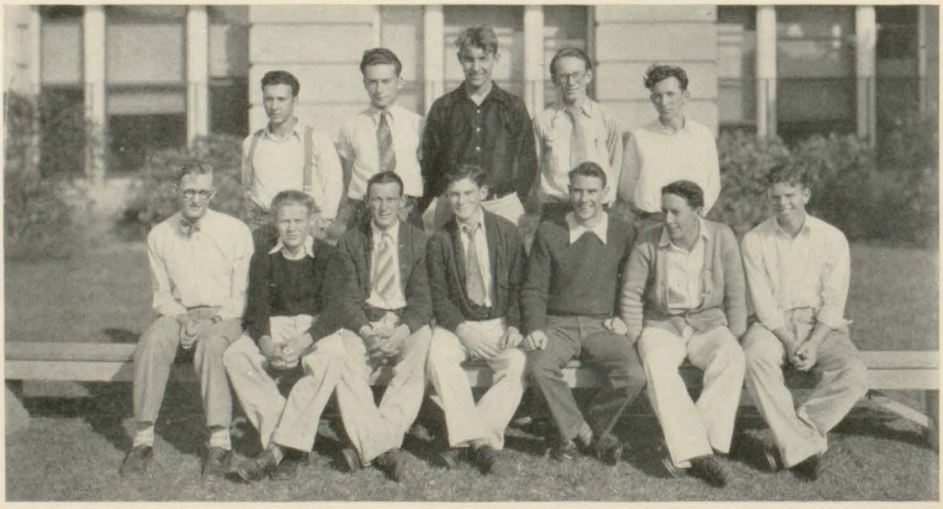

Art Club

The Art Club is always ready and willing to give a finishing touch in an artistic way when it is needed.

The officers for the past year were: president, Gordon Sherwood; vice-president, Roger Daley; secretary, Jimmie Hauptman; treasurer, Bob Held; social chairman, Alice Strickland; and charter membership, Peggy Loomis.

Stage Crew

The busiest boys of the school are the stage crew. James Pumphrey, assisted by John Fox, managed the stage for all performances in the fall. This term John Fox did the work as manager with the able assistance of Bill Cox. Their efficiency should be highly commended.

Beautifying Committee

How glad we are to welcome a new committee this year called the Beautifying Committee, composed of members of the faculty. These teachers are intensely interested in improving appearances of the school inside and out. The idea of this interesting group is to establish policies insuring unity of beauty in the interior and exterior of the school, both now and in the future.

According to Miss Hayes, the halls will soon be taking on new colors and attractive decorations. The pictures now in the recitation rooms and those in storage will soon be in suitable places. What a joy to know that the study hall wll be re-decorated, relieving the monotony of a study period. The English office will be one of the many offices to be attractively furnished. Panels portraying the life of Benjamin Franklin will grace either the Main Building or the Auditorium, with statues in interesting corners.

Mr. Galbraith, who has charge of the exterior improvements, explained that new awnings will shade the wings from rain and sunshine. The courts between the buildings will be landscaped, and this will greatly improve the general looks of the school and serve for recreation places. These are not idle dreams, but will materialize soon.

Calve Riddle and Lila Schlieper were the past presidents of the Ramblers and led the girls on many a rollicking ramble so they might become better acquainted with dame nature. Miss Elaine Anderson organized and sponsored this group.

Ushers

This group has been organized into a very able body this last term by Mr. O'Neal. The officers are: head usher, Lawrence Killius; assistant head usher, Fred Horner; social chairman, Tom Wychoff; and treasurer, Victor Sein.

Archery Club

Hitting the bull's eye is both work and play for the girls of the Archery Club, who have organized for the purpose of creating interest in this sport.

The officers for this club were: president, Eleanor Perry; treasurer and social chairman, Janet Wilson; and press reporter, Lovell Van Meter.

Aero Club

The Aero Club is composed of boys interested in the study of aeronautics. Dick Fuller was president for the past year, with Harry Grabbert, vice-president, Orson Brown, secretary, and Bert Bertelson, social chairman.

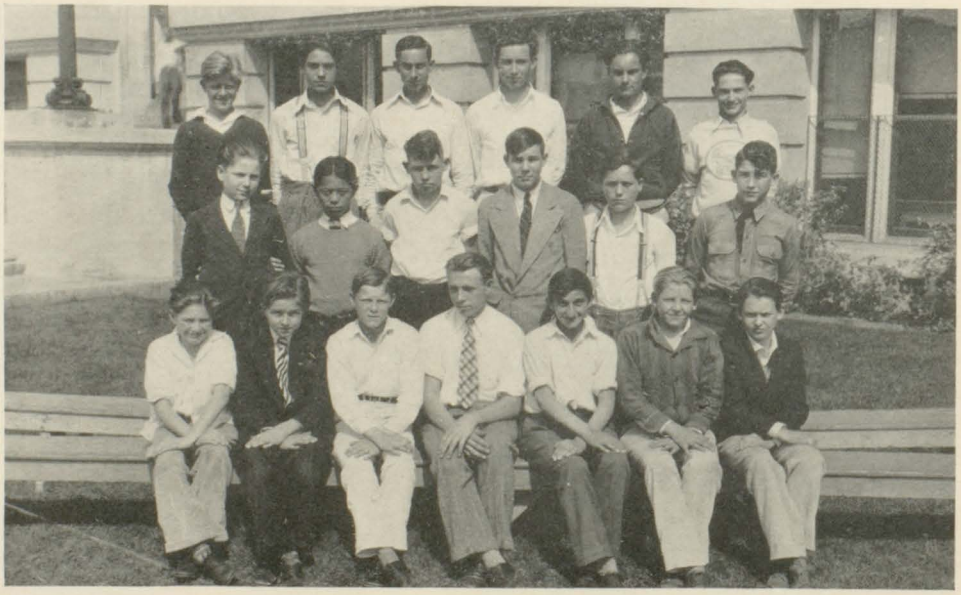

Hook and Curve Club

This club was composed of girls who had a high standard in short-hand and office practice. Their officers for the term were: President, Grace Koehm; vice-president, Eleanor Barlow; treasurer, Florence Bryant; scretary, Cecile Waterbury; Press representative, Florence McMeekin.

Harmonica Club

This club was organized under the direction of Gerald Holcombe, who has much interest in it. Several of the members gave selections at the "pep" rallies and they were enjoyed by all.

Treasurers Club

Under the efficient leadership of Mr. Parker, the Treasurers' Club has become one of the most active organizations at Franklin. This group is comprised of one student from each classroom or classroom section who is elected by the members of his classroom each term.

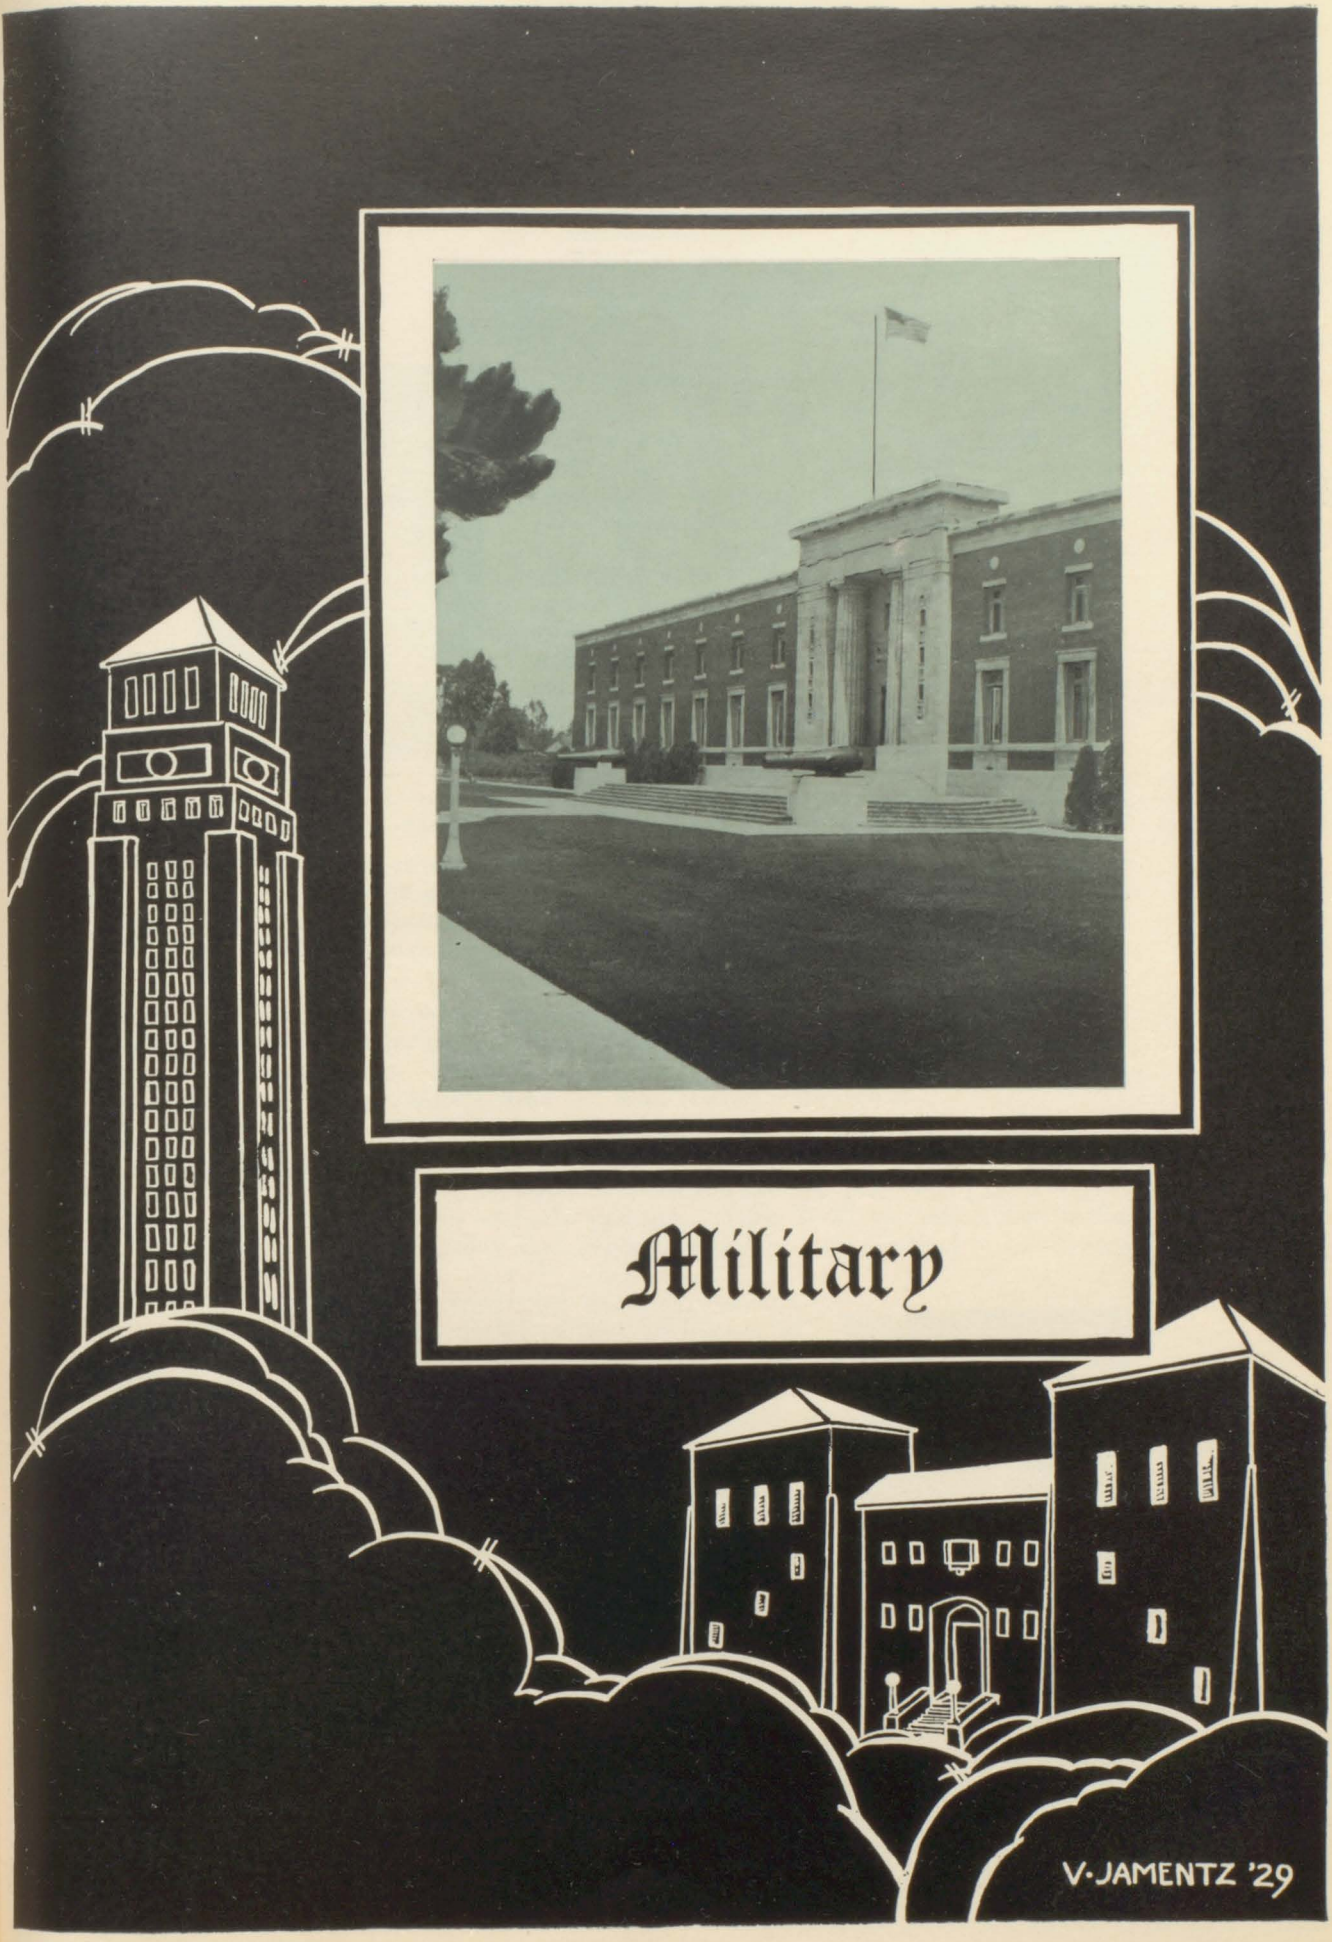

Service credits are given to the members of this club as a reward for their services to the school. As a general rule, only students of very high standing are elected to this responsible position.

Robert Blake, who was treasurer of the class of Winter '29 and fullfilled this difficult office so skillfully, attributed his success to the fact that he had the willing cooperation of the entire class.

The class of Summer '29 elected as their treasurer John La Fleur, who has amply justified their trust in him by dextrously collecting class dues, and money for cards, coats, and all the other extras which make this position so complicated. He had for assistants from the individual sections the following students: Leonard Boller, George Childers, John Egan, Evelyn Hall, Elizabeth King, Frances Phelps, Winston Sutherland, and Sylvia Thomas.

The Treasurers' Club has frequent meetings at which they discuss ways and means of giving more efficient financial service to the students. That they succeed in this endeavor we may see when we know of their numerous activities, for they collect the classroom dues, see that their room is one hundred percent in paying for towel tickets, they take in money for the subscriptions to the Press, and sell tickets for the Almanac, as well as occasional extra jobs which are not included in their regular work.

For their service to the school, much credit is due this group and especially to Mr. Parker, who guides them in their duties.

Military

The R. O. T. C.

Recognized as an organization of influence and importance, the Reserve Officers Training Corps, better known as the R. O. T. C., is considered of great value to Franklin. As an aid to the boys in acquiring the abilities of leaders and helping them grow into better men, the R. O. T. C. has ever stood high. The credit given to the boys who make up this active school unit is not unwarranted, either, as has been proven many times by the boys themselves.

When representing Franklin in numerous contests and performances, never once have the military lads failed to bring other than praise to their school. Competition between the different companies adds interest to the everyday routine. Service points, ribbons, and a loving cup are given to the various winners. During the last term, one theater ticket a week was presented to the best R. O. T. C. member.

There are about two hundred boys in the entire group, and each day they have some form of drill or practice to keep up the fine name which has already been given them. Although the students must be in the tenth grade to enter this form of school life, the ranks are filled with upper-classmen ready to prove their leadership.

Their quarters, which are comparatively new, provide ample room for class lessons on military tactics. Sufficient space is also given over as store rooms and individual offices. Visitors may be shown the R. O. T. C. headquarters with pride as they are always clean and neat, ready for inspection.

The Student Body is justly proud of the two military leaders, Major Wells and Master Sergeant Green. The latter has been selected to teach the recuits.

Major Wells has led the boys for seven and one-half years and gained respect and admiration for his soldierly qualities. Major Wells has raised them to the fine place they hold today since the time when the unit consisted of less than a hundred students.

Master Sergeant Greer has been at Franklin three years and has quickly accustomed himself to the active life led by the Student Body. After many commissions in foreign lands, Sergeant Greer is content to remain at home and teach other generations the ways of a soldier.

Among the divisions inside that of the R. O. T. C. is the band. It is most important in drill work and also in providing entertainment for the school. The band has won many contests and is one of the big reasons for joining the R. O. T. C.,

As a fitting close to the year, the Franklin unit is hoping to again hold the title of honor school which was bestowed upon them once before and for which every school competes annually.

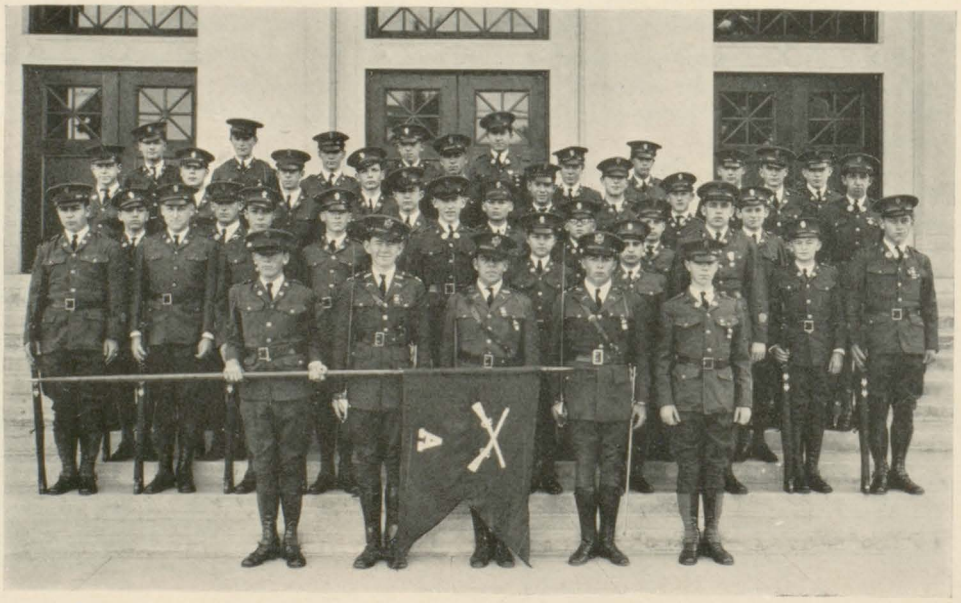

MAJOR KENNEDY, W'29

Company A

Company A, which was under the leadership of Captain John Hess, was the rookie company. Drilling, rifle practice and other military maneuvers were practiced by the members under their capable leaders: John Hess, Captain; Bruce Walker, First Lieutenant; Louis Bader, Second Lieutenant; Kenneth Hartzell, Second Lieutenant.

A contest was held between the two companies which aided greatly in bringing up their drill work and personal appearance. Although Company A was not the winner, the members won sufficient points to make the contest close.

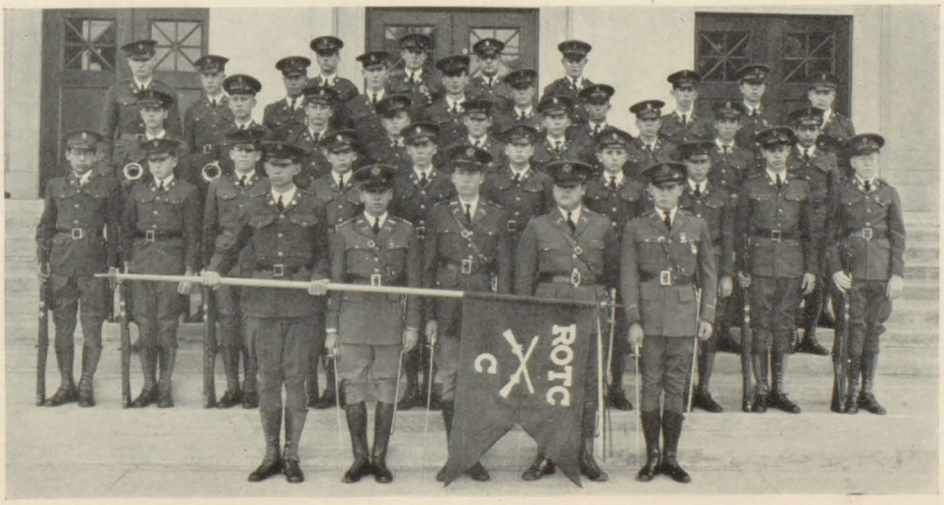

Major Fuller, S'29

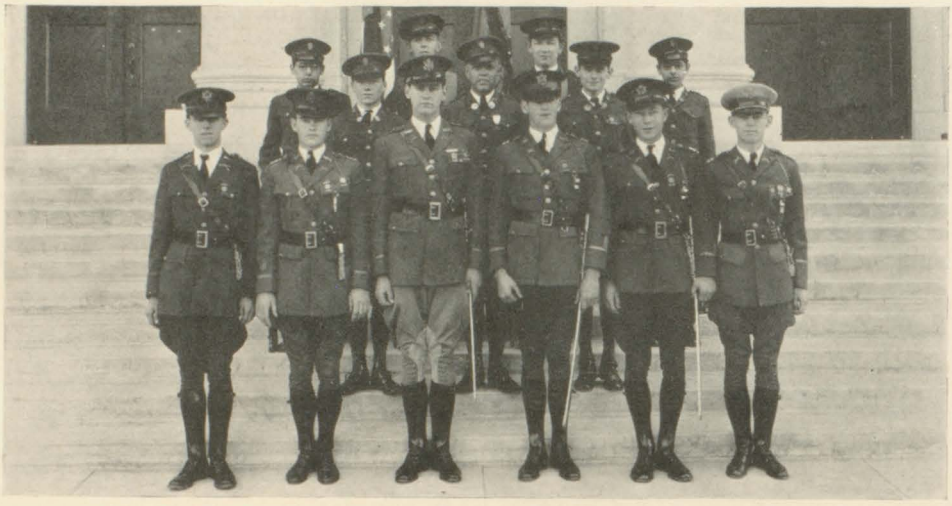

Company C

By earning the most points for drill work, appearance, and best line-up, Company C won the cup which was awarded to the winner.

Their spring term was as successful as their fall term and they worked hard to earn the necessary points under the leadership of Captain Oliver Peltier, First Lieutenane Emerson Rice, Second Lieutenant Orson Brown, and Second Lieutenant Ryan Brennan.

The chances for their winning the cup were high and they kept up appearances to the very last of the term.

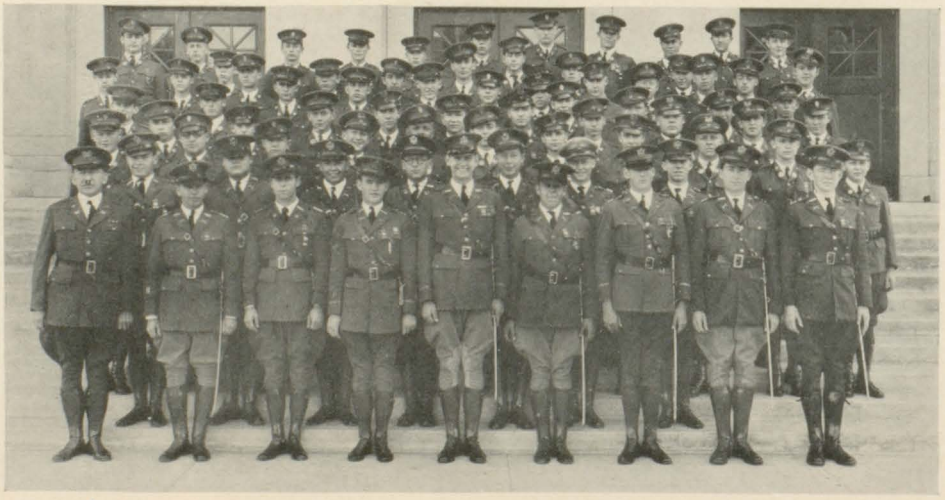

R. O. T. C. Staff

Members of the R. O. T. C. staff consist of the following: Major Wells, a student major, an adjutant and personnel adjutant, an executive officer, a range officer, a color guard and the color sergeants, and all staff sergeants.

Officers' Club

The Officers' Club, which was organized for social purposes, is composed of R. O. T. C. members.

Fall term officers were: president, Richard Fuller; vice-president, Ladislaw Goncz; secretary-treasurer, Fred Lieb; and social chairman, Ralph Smim. John Hess led the group as president in the spring term and Fred Lieb was vice-president, Ralph Swim, secretary-treasurer, and Roy Gorsuch, social chairman.

MR. GILSON, Director

Franklin Band

As director of the school band, Mr. Gilson has indeed brought credit to Franklin. Under his supervision the boys have worked hard and long to win the many cups and banners which may be seen in the Student Body office. Credit also must be given to Ralph Swim, captain of the band, who directed the boys during both the fall and spring terms. Under his leadership the band has grown and advanced. Beside playing at the athletic games and aud calls, this musical organization has been called into outside work. By leading one of the divisions at the New Year's parade, entertaining at a night program and playing for the World War veterans, they added further credit to their name. All is not hard work for these young men, though, for they enjoy many social outings together, frequently meeting at the beach or at skating rinks.

Coach Lopez

It has been the good fortune of Franklin to be able to claim Coach Lopez for four years now. We are proud of a man like this for the head of the boys' physical training department. While Lopez attended the University of California he participated in basketball and baseball, and these are the sports which he coaches.

Coach Hess

For a football coach we are proud to have Mr. Hess assuming the duties. While at Pennsylvania State and Colgate he was a star footballer.

Coach Spangler

The eager tracksters were guided by Coach Spangelr this year as well as in years gone by. While at Oxy he took part in both track and football.

Coach McCollom

Gym and drill teams were under Coach McCollom this year. His coaching ability in this line is regarded as the best in the city.

Coach Jellison

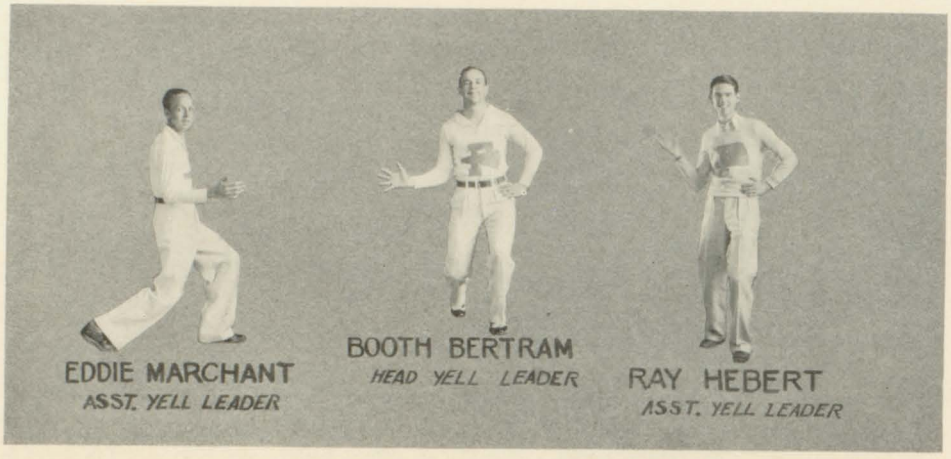

Roy Jellison is a natural born coach, and he has the instinct well-developed. He takes care of baseball, football and basketball very creditably.

Coach Miller

Rex Miller assumed the duties as Class C football coach. He played at the University of California in his college days and was known also to be a fine track man.

Coach Gilbert

Tennis has been and is being coached by Mr. Gilbert of the Science department, and the teams he has put out are evidence of the fact that he is a good coach.

Yell Leaders

It is true that if a school has poor yell leaders the spirit corresponds. Franklin has been singularly fortunate in the past year in having two very fine groups of Yell Leaders. Jack Brooks assumed the duties of head yell leader with Booth Bertram and Ray Hebert assisting him during the winter term. Brooks introduced many new yells with much success.

For the succeeding semester Booth Bertram took over the difficult duties of the office of head yell leader. He was aided by Eddie Marchant and Ray Hebert. This combination put over some real peppy yells and helped make the baseball season as spectacular as the football term had been.

Class "A" Football

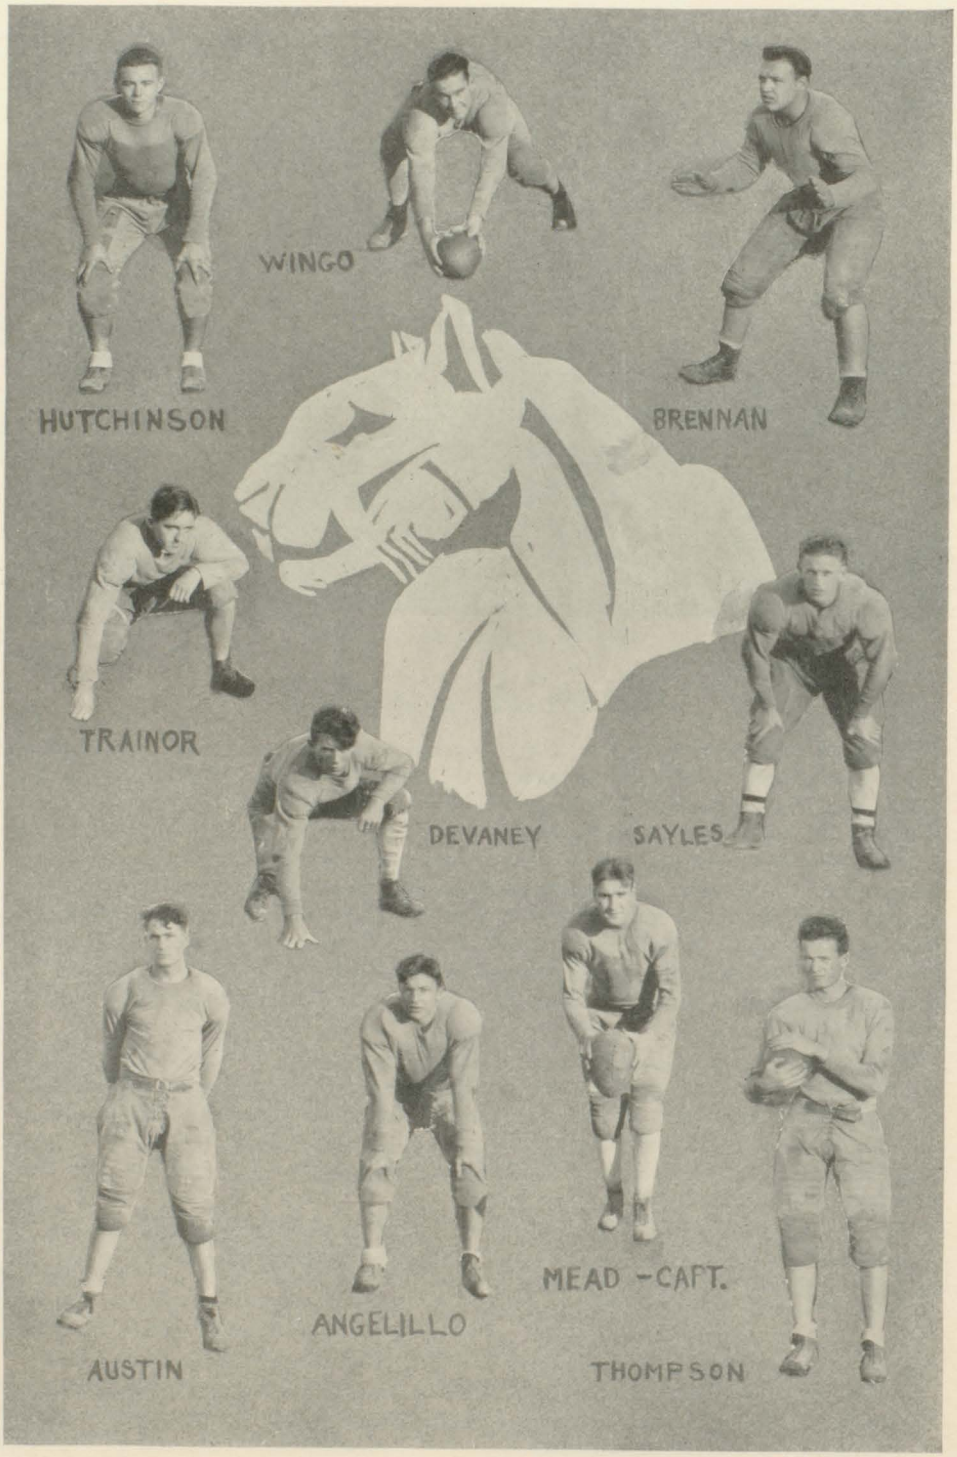

All eyes were turned on Franklin's pigskinners this year as they were of an unknown quality. Only one letterman, Captain Mead, was returning from the '27 footballers. Although handicapped by weight, the Panthers made up for it in fight, displaying such as was shown in the L. A. and Jefferson games, both of which ended in an 0-0 tie, and the Hollywood game which found Franklin on the long end of a 6-0 score. The other three games were lost as a result of playing against hard luck. In many respects Franklin invested its might in the backfield in McDonald, Hutchinson, Pruett, Sayles, Held and Livesay, and on the line in B. Brennan, Tramor, Wingo, Mead, Grabbert and Thompson. The reason for doing so was that these fellows were nearly always to be found in the starting line-ups.

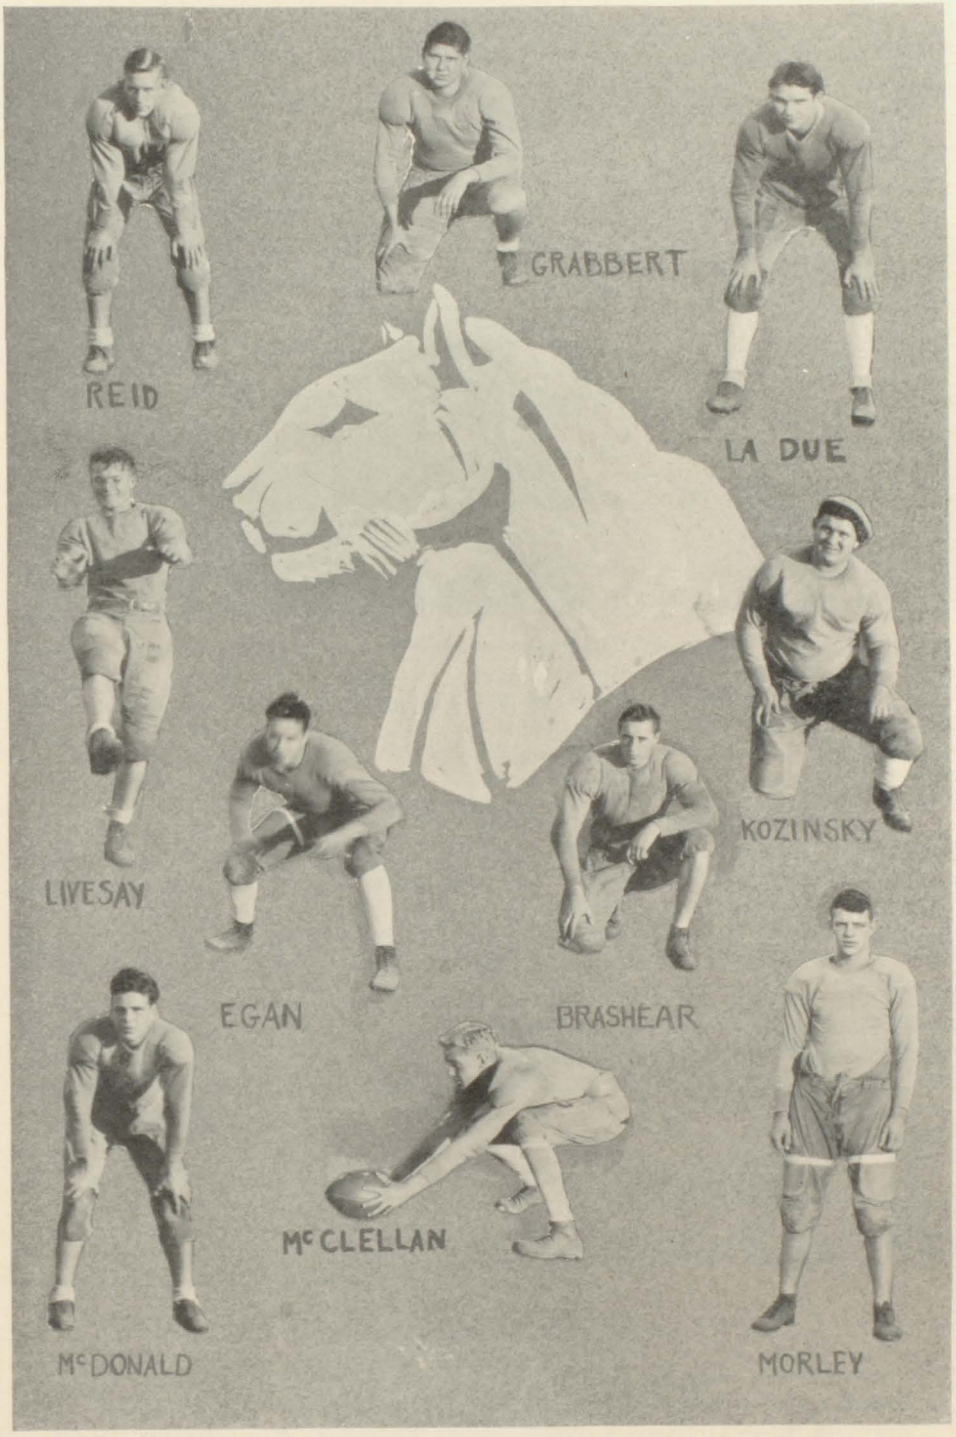

When the season again rolls around there will be a number of fellows returning, which will mount up into the 'teens. Of these returning men, Franklin will again cast eyes on most of the mainstays of the '28 varsity. These include McDonald, Hutchinson, Sayles, Carr, B. Brennan, H. Livesay, Thompson, Grabbert and McClellan. Of this list the first two and the last two look like sure shots.

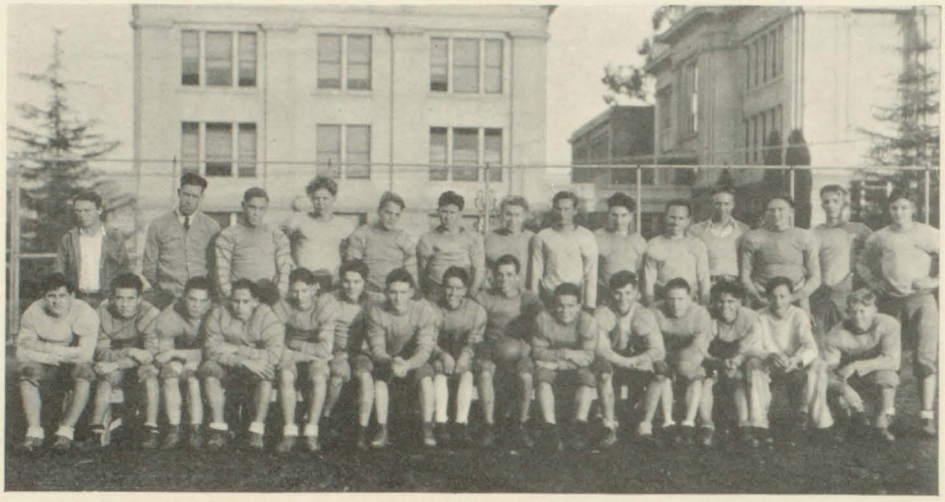

Due to their lack of weight, which handicapped them severely, a number of fellows were victims of mishaps. Bob Held, John La Fleur and Harry Grabbert were among those laid up with injuries.

Class "B" Football

As usual, the "lite-weight" squad was one of the scrappiest bunches of footballers in the city. Mr. Jellison, although not able to put out a championship team, was able to put a team on the field that lived up to the reputation of the school, which in itself is "sportsmanship." The squad was built around Captain McCue, who held down the pivot position so well that he was chosen on the All-City light-weight squad.

The remaining positions on the team were hotly contested by fellows that knew their football strategy. For the guard positions McChesney, Johnson, Jobe, Silverstein and Wooley fought it out, with the three first fellows getting in most of the fighting. Meeker, Bixler, and Brown were doing their part at tackle, stopping all off-tackle bucks. The wing positions were held down by Tomlinson, Hood, Freeman and Clemens, and these men caused a lot of trouble for the opposing teams.

Men fast as lightning were needed for the backfield, so Bosch, Wooldridge, Jackson, Lenhart, Widdess, Booth and Washburn took over this department to the satisfaction of Coach Jellison, Virgil Gladson and Hulbert Castle. The last two are student coaches. Castle, as an ineligible man, helped with the coaching duties.

Out of six games the club was able to annex two of them. Jefferson came out on the short end of a big score of 23-6, and Lincoln did the same on a 6-0 score. If the team had shown as much fight as they did in these games the pennant would be Franklin's for the first time in many a year.

Class C Football

Franklin was represented this year in the Class C division pigskinners by a bunch of young lads who had the fighting spirit of Franklin running true in their veins. Out of their four games they won two, lost one, and tied one, which is a very fine record for such small fellows.

Mr. Miller, their coach, practically built a team out of nothing, as you might say. When the boys came out for their first night of practice at the beginning of the season nary a one knew what he could play, so they were worked at the positions that they could best fill, and out of discouraging material their coach was able to make a second-place winner.

In the backfield there was one of the smoothest-running quartets of the city. Captain Battistessa, Tom Wychoff, Parker Seeman, Paul Shinoda and Bob Evans were the fellows who made up this lot. In Melbourne Tuttle the midgets vested their power in the punting. It was not unusual to see him get off a thirty to forty yard kick in a game.

The boys who made up the line were "shorty" Sherwood, Joe Signorelli, Melbourne Tuttle, Frank Puckett, Bob Easton, Kenny Robinson and "Sonny" Cole, and these were both hard to stop and hard to get by when they were in the fighting mood, and they generally were.

The school as a whole is proud of these boys and it is hoped that they will keep up their spirit in this game.

Class A Basketball

Franklin's chances of winning the pennant this year were slight, due to the turn-out. In all, there were but eight fellows who came out to give all they had for Franklin. These fellows enjoyed playing together, but they were unable to sink the pellota in the basket for the much-needed digits.

Although the scores were big, the contesting schools had to fight every minute of the game to make them such. The club as a whole had a great deal to put up with; namely, first there was the question of the ability of the players, a hard one for Coach Jellison. Out of the eight, only three had ever played on an organized team. Second, there was the support of the student body that faded out like a light after the first game; and, last but not least, the team was put up against players who stood head and shoulders taller than themselves and they had been coached throughout the season on fundamentals.

Herbie Weir was the mainstay of the team. With his fight, he made the other teams look weak by tossing them into the basket from the forward position. Johnnie La Fleur and Roland Symonds were two more fellows who helped a lot at the forward positions.

Parker and Anderson were the center men. Although they were smaller than most of the opposing centers, they made up for it with their fight.

Ford, Gregory, and Watson held down the guard positions very creditably.

Class B Basketball

The chances for a championship team looked bright this last year for the light-weight casaba tossers at the beginning of the season, as there were a goodly number of experienced men out for the club. But it was in vain, for the fellows were weak on the fundamentals and this was the cause for the loss of their games.

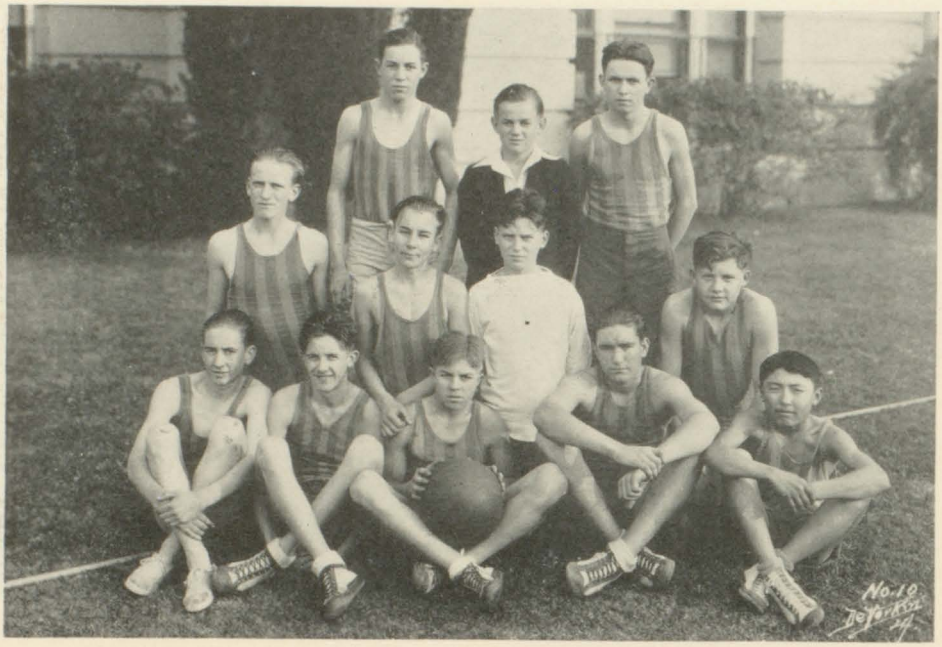

Clyde Wilcox, forward, last year's letter man of the squad, was the only returning man. Around him Coach Spangler and Herbie Hughes built the team. Goldstein and Snowden alternated at the remaining forward position, while Redondo had the center position to himself, and he surely took care of himself very creditably.

Jamentz and Simmons, two guards from last year's Class C squad, made up the personnel of the first string of the team. There were also a number of other fellows alternating with these five above-mentioned casaba tossers when the going was a little too strong for them in regard to their lung capacity.

The light-weights always seemed to have the pep and vim in the first half, but in the latter half they seemed to give up hope and to lose the lead they generally had by that time. All of the fellows who scrapped for the squad will be back to make what is expected to be one of the best varsity basketball teams seen at the Panther aggregation.

With a little more studying of the fundamentals and quicker thinking the fellows will have the pennant for Franklin when the season ends next year.

Class C Basketball

In every game this year that Class C played they were on the short end of the score. They fought in an untiring effort to "sink the casaba" for the much-needed digits, but their absence of knowledge of the fundamentals and their lack of height were the cause of their many defeats. This was Coach Hess' first time at coaching basketball for the locals, and under the trying circumstances he did a fine job.

Captain Bob White is one of the finest forwards in the city in the midget group. His defensive and offensive playing are all that could be expected of him by Coach Hess.

"Tommy" Kettlewell, "Bud" Helm, and "Tapioca" Hiroto alternated at the remaining forward position so well that they all saw service in every game.

For the position of tip-off man, Westlake and Graham for the locals do much in helping score points. Westlake had the edge over Graham due to his past experience at the game.

The hardest position on the team, which is the guard position, was filled by Ray Randazzo, Early, Woodward, and occasionally "Bud" Helm. These fellows did much in stopping the onrush of the opposing team.

With a little more practice on defensive and offensive playing and the studying of fundamentals, these small lads should make up one of the strongest lightweight teams in the city next year.

Class A Track

Coach Spangler's hopefuls were given a fighting chance this year and that was all. This was due to the fact that there was but one returning letterman, Captain Pruett, miler, and the remaining events were filled in by inexperienced men.

In the sprints, Jack Reid and "Howie" Saylcs gave what they had.

Walter La Due, Irvin Cessna and Bob Sayles ran the furlong. La Due proved to be the best of the trio.

Captain Pruett upheld Franklin's honor in the mile run with a spirit of fight and stamina that was remarkable. Pruett ran a wonderful race and was usually victorious. Jack Snow and Hayes Ewing were the other entries in the mile.

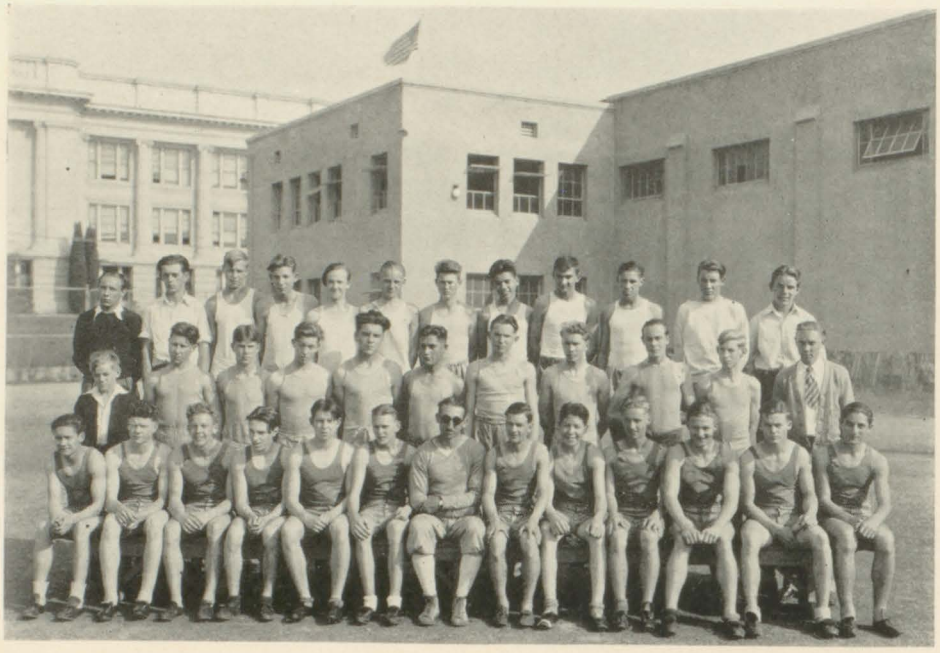

Bob Held, Wally La Due and Mario Mora were the runners of the low sticks. They showed up exceptionally well in this event under the trying circumstances.

Bob Brennan and Ted Houk were the weight men. Their inexperience in this event proved their downfall.

Childers and Austin were the broad-jumpers. They gave all they had for Franklin and we are proud of them.

"Pants" Livesay and George Childers jumped the high bar for the locals. They made jumps of 5 feet 8 or more.

Millard McCue represented Franklin in the high sticks. Although he was not a first-place winner he gave plenty of competition for the other schools.

Class B Track

This being the first year in which there was Class B track competition in the city it looked like Franklin was to have a good season in this class. Coach Spangler had high hopes for a championship team, but when the season came to a close the Panthers had lost the championship by a few points in the city meet. The boys gave all they had, but that was not quite enough.

Bob Casey, Howard Jobe and Jerome Hull were the century men and they performed very well.

Ray Rork and Gordon Imler ran the 66-yard run, with Rork a slight favorite.

Harold Mitchell, "Doc" Castle and Melbourne Tuttle ran the 120-yard low hurdles, all three running at close intervals. Tuttle also ran the 70-yard lows.

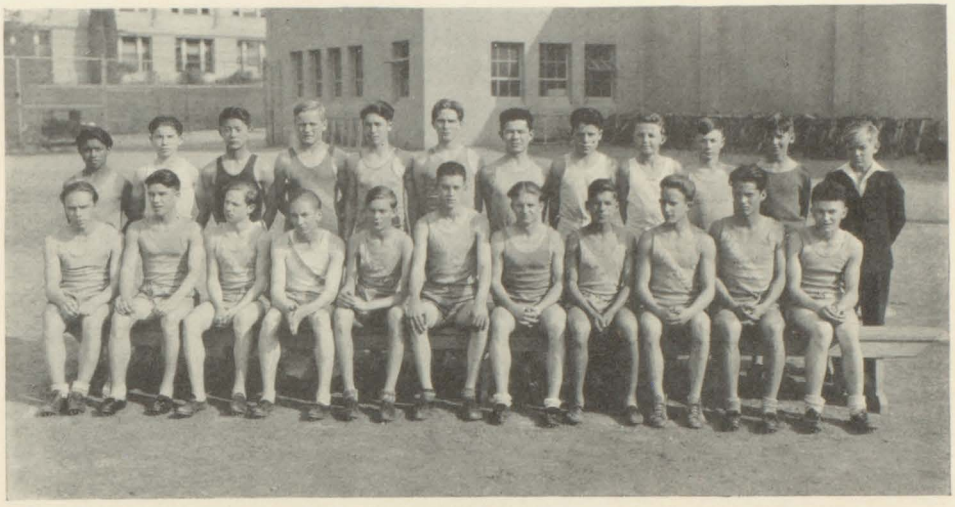

In the 120-yard run Lacy Harper and Gilbert Burgoyne participated, garnering many points.

The pole vault was taken care of by Runo Larson, who was no slacker when it came to contributing points.

Morris Fisher and Harold Mitchell were the high-jumpers. They took care of this event to great advantage, both to themselves and the school.

The broad-jump was the Panther's event in the city meet, for Mitchell, Hood and Jobe finished respectively. Mitchell's jump was 21 feet 3½ inches.

"Bob" Allaire and "Howie" Scher tossed the iron ball for our team, with good results. Casey, Jobe, Hull and Castle made up the relay team..

Class C Track

The Class C track team that so nobly represented the Panther institution this last year was rated as one of the best midget track teams that ever wore the blue and buff track suits. The cause of their being so rated was due to the fact that they were a bunch of fighters. They gave what they had until they had crossed the finish line.

The best bets Coach Spangler had were the boys who took part in the sprints, low hurdles and the broad jump.

In the 50 yard dash, Charles Penny, Art Gordon, and Dick Carson were the trio of racing whippets, as they were known to their team-mates.

The century was well taken care of by Carson, Penny, and Waers, with Penny a slight favorite.

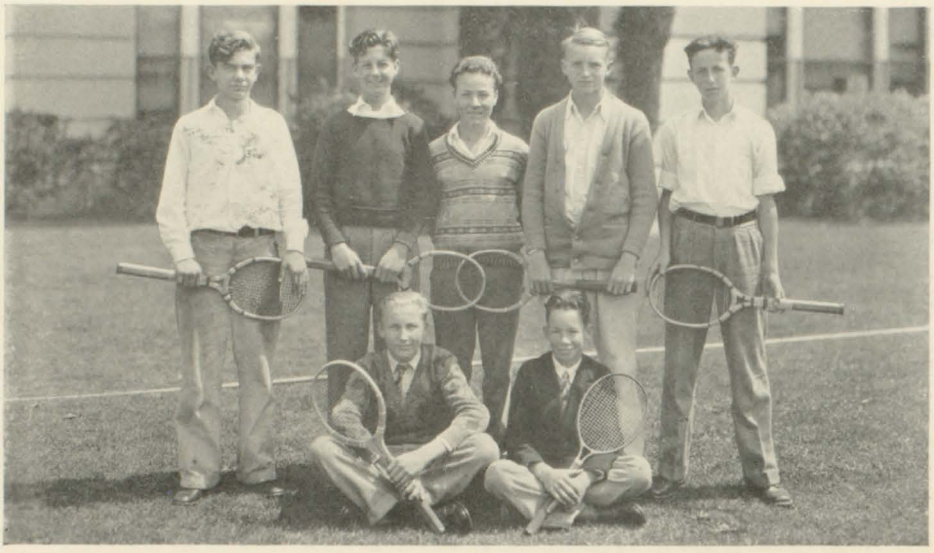

The 660 yard race was the "drudgery race" in which Sullivan, Glidden, and Jones did exceptionally well. Nielleish, another 660 man, was out a number of meets due to illness, but when in he was a sure comer.

Early, Gordon, and Glidden were the participants in the 120 yard low hurdles. Many points were scored due to their fleet feet.

In the broad jump, Gordon, Seeman, Sullivan, and McGaughey were also the cause of many points being scored in favor of Franklin.

Carson was the high altitude man, while Seeman did the high jumping for the squad.

Penny, Gordon, Carson, and Waers are wearing medals for placing the relay team second in the City Finals.

Tennis

The lack of experienced men was a hard thing to put up with this last year in tennis. The loss of such men as "Howie" Williams, Bob Yetter, last year's captain, John Enfield, and Fred Axtel was felt keenly by Coach H. Gilbert, tennis mentor of the Panther aggregation. This condition made it very difficult to form a well-balanced team.

The boys who so nobly fought out on the court for the honor of the school are deserving of much praise. Tennis at Franklin has changed to one of the highest ranking minor sports in the school, due to Coach Gilbert's untiring efforts in trying to produce a team that would be a credit to Franklin.

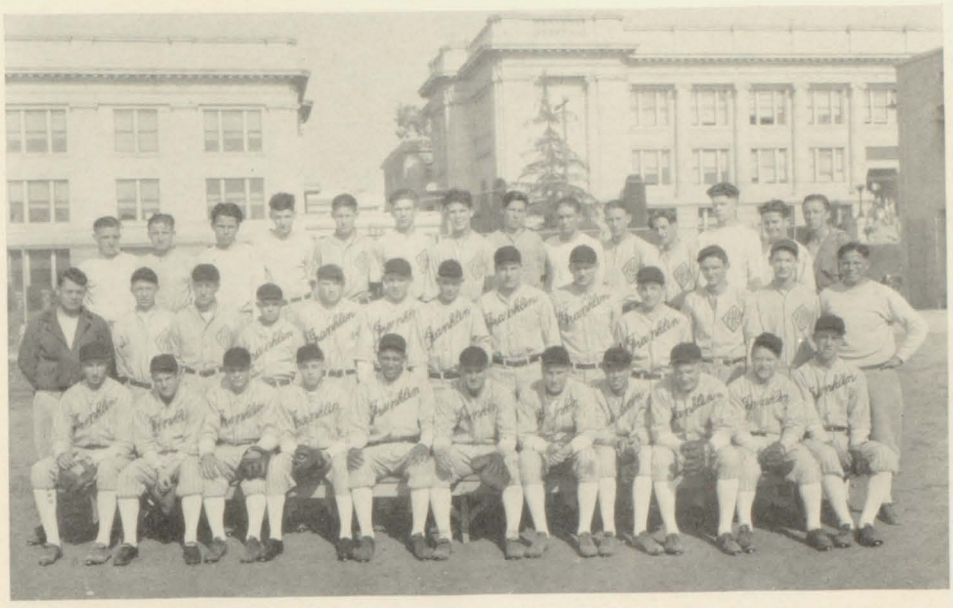

"Buss" Snowden no doubt had the position of first man cinched from the beginning of the season due to his clever defensive and offensive playing.

Atchley started working from the beginning of the season so earnestly that he had a slight edge over Captain McGaughey, at the time that the scheduled games started, for the position of second man.

Captain McGaughey showed up well in the position of third man, causing a great deal of trouble to his opponents.

Liedholt held down the place of fourth man very creditably. This is his first and last year.

Keeny held down the position of fifth man with Zieve and Bishop filling in the sixth and seventh positions respectively. They kept up the standard of these positions exceedingly well.

Class "A" Baseball

With only five returning veterans and a number of Class B pill chasers, Coach Lopez set about the difficult task of garnering a championship club.

With these men as a nucleus around which to build a championship team, prospects for a successful season looked exceedingly bright; and at the time of this write-up, early in the season, predictions seem destined to be borne out.

Too much credit cannot be given to Coach Lopez for his wonderful work with the team. There is not a boy who has played under Coach Lopez who has not the highest regard and respect for him.

Mead's covering of the ground around the hot corner is executed very well. He is an exceptionally fine hitter.

"Sal" Machuca is playing his fourth and final year on the mound for the Panthers. He is cited as one of the best in the city.

There are three relief pitchers serving this year. Redondo, Harris and Hoffman are the boys serving in this capacity, and they look like promising material for next year's club.

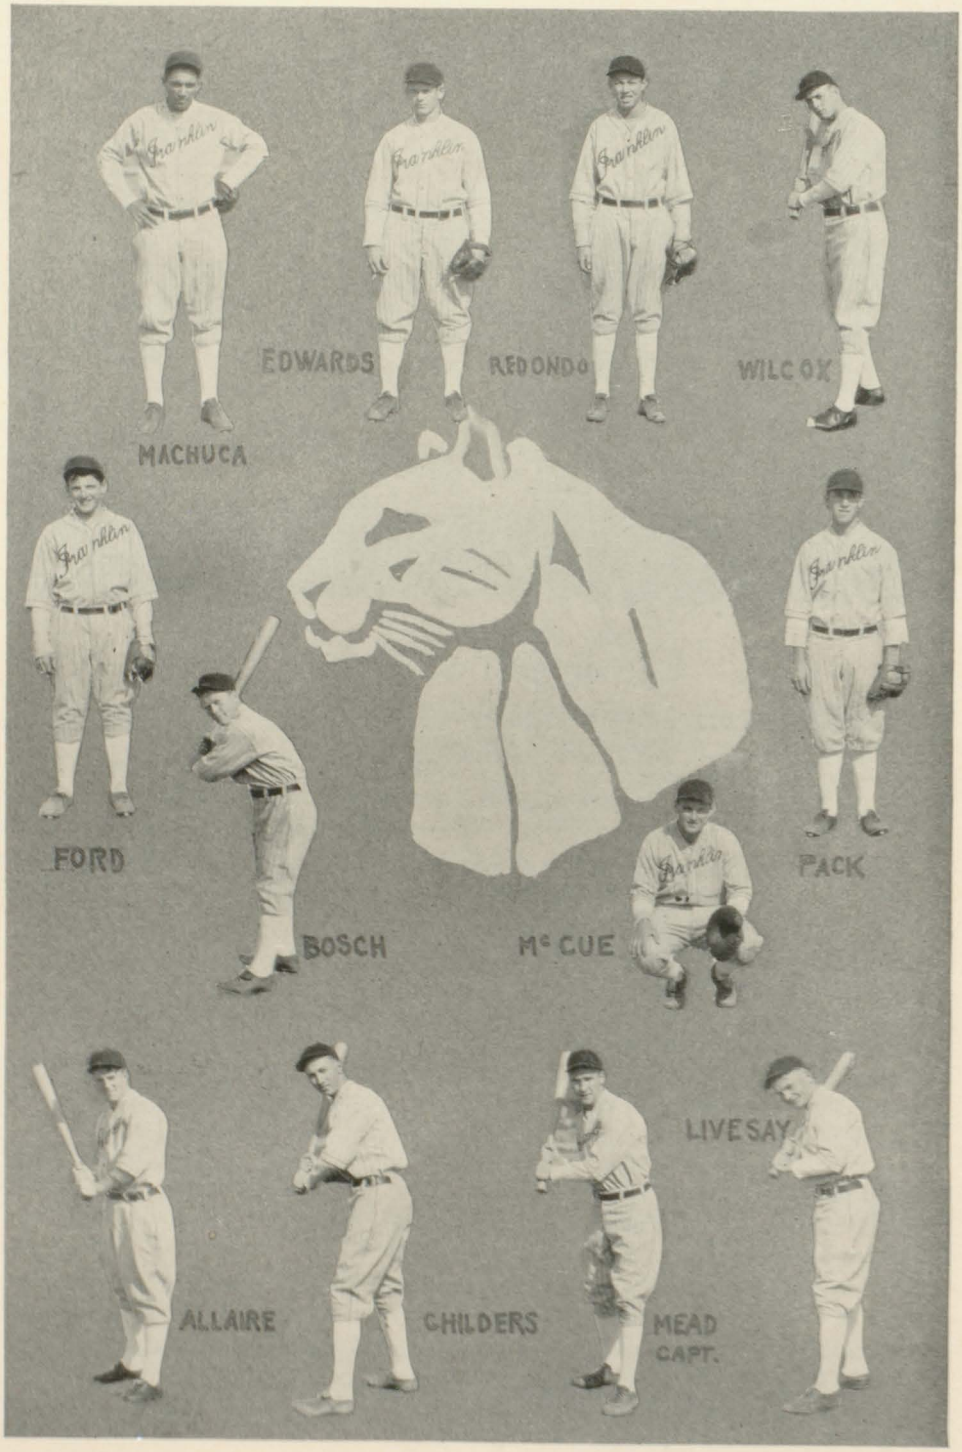

McCue is an exceptionally strong hitter for a catcher. He throws right-handed and does his batting left-handed. This is his second year on the club.

Allaire is one of the finest shortstops in the league and should prove to be All-City due to fielding and hitting.

Edwards has been taking care of the keystone sack exceptionally well and his hitting is a source of satisfaction to Coach Lopez.

Childers and Wilcox take care of the initial sack for the locals in good shape. They are both fine hitters.

The outer gardens are being taken care of by Livesay, Ford and Jackson along with Bosch. They are all strong hitters.

Class C Baseball

For a successful season the prospects looked good in the pre-season game. Mr. Jellison, the coach of championship teams, had a large number of fellows out for the club when the call for aspirants was sounded. The boys were of fine quality in both fielding and hitting and they proved it by their continual winning of practice games.

"Emmy" Boats was the backstop man and he worked the chuckers like a veteran.

"Lefty" Hart will be a fine prospect for Coach Lopez in a year or so, for he is one of the finest southpaw pitchers ever seen out for Class C.

Leo Schilz is making a name for himself in athletics. He played on the Class B casaba team in his first year and now he is holding down the initial sack for the Class C horsehiders. He is an exceptional hitter.

Doyle took care of the keystone sack in a way that made up for his weak hitting.

"Bob" Ralston was the keeper of the "hot corner" and this was done very creditably. He was one of Coach Jellison's strongest hitters.

Hanlin proved to be a valuable man due to his ability to cover the ground between second and third.

Cena, Doman, Eastman and Webster were the men that worked out in the daisy patch and they looked "good" due to their strong hitting.

Athladelphians

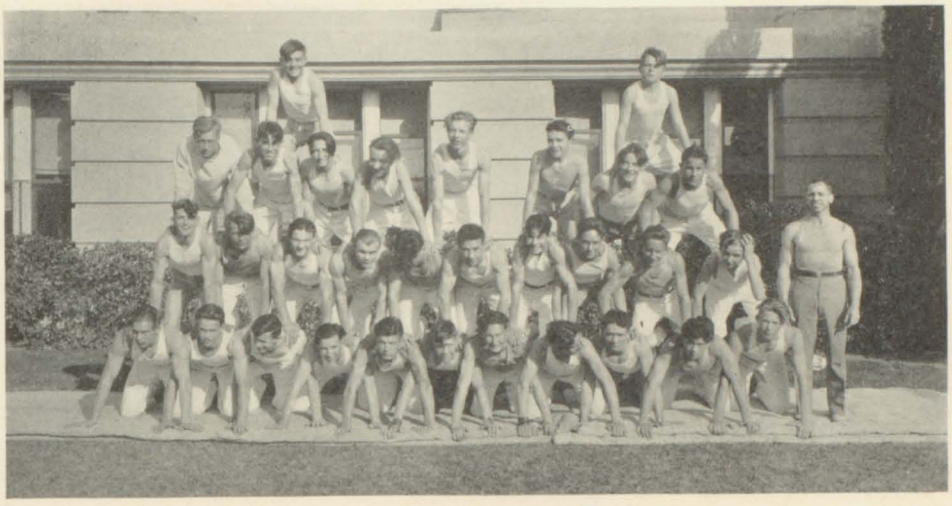

The young and active boy athletes of the school who have the ability to win a letter automatically become members of the Athladelphian Society. The purpose of the society is that of maintaining and furthering friendly spirit in regard to sportsmanship at Franklin.

About three years ago the society admitted the younger fellows, that is both the light-weight and 110-pound lettermen, for the sole purpose of creating a greater interest among the younger boys in an attempt to build up future varsity teams. Although it has not resulted in any championship teams, it has been the cause of making the teams that represent Franklin possess the fighting spirit, and also making the blood of true sportsmen run clean in their veins.

This is the first year that Boys' Night was not given. We hope next year our fellows will be able to get together on the subject and continue the custom.

Hayes Mead, who captained both the varsity football team and varsity baseball team, held the office of president for the year, and he was a capable man in the position. It is very seldom that one fellow fills this office for a whole year. Mr. Lopez, head of the boys physical education and coach of the baseball club, sponsored the society.

The fellows are indebted to Mr. Sniffen, boys' vice-principal, for his many fine talks to them on the athlete's view point of life.

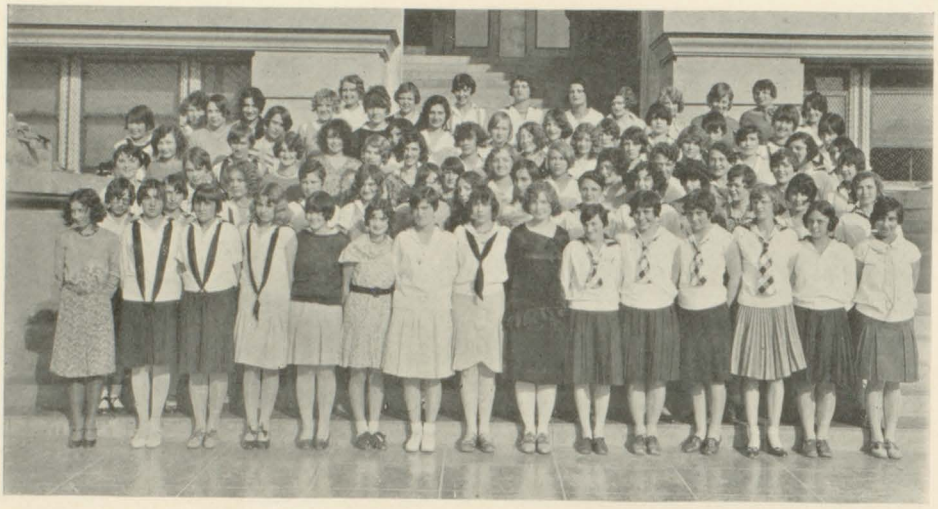

Boys' Gym Club

Franklin was represented by a very well trained Gym Club this year, although they lost many good men last year. The boys had no real schedule to follow, but they did show up exceptionally well in practice meets. Howard Fairbanks was the president for the year, and Mr. McCollum was their coach.

Girls' Swimming Club

During the past year, more than a hundred girls have gone swimming at the Pasadena Y. W. C. A. on Thursday afternoons. Frances Phelps represented the Girls' Athletic Association in this sport. Much credit is due Miss Kennedy, who gave her time so generously and did so much to make the Swimming Club a success.

Girls' Athletic Association

Any girl who earns fifty points in a sport is eligible for membership in the Girls' Athletic Association. The girls who obtain five hundred points are given their letter at the Award Day Aud Call.

Officers for the term ending in February were: president, Hally Stires; vice-president, Alma Garvin; secretary, Eleanor Barlow; and treasurer, Leona Ware. The sports were headed by: Dorothy Luhrs, tennis; Marguerite Decker, basketball; and Caroline Morris, hiking.

During the spring term, Eleanor Barlow acted as president; Carol Lea served as vice-president; the secretary was Maurine McGinnis; and Laura Irwin, as treasurer, struggled with the Association's finances.

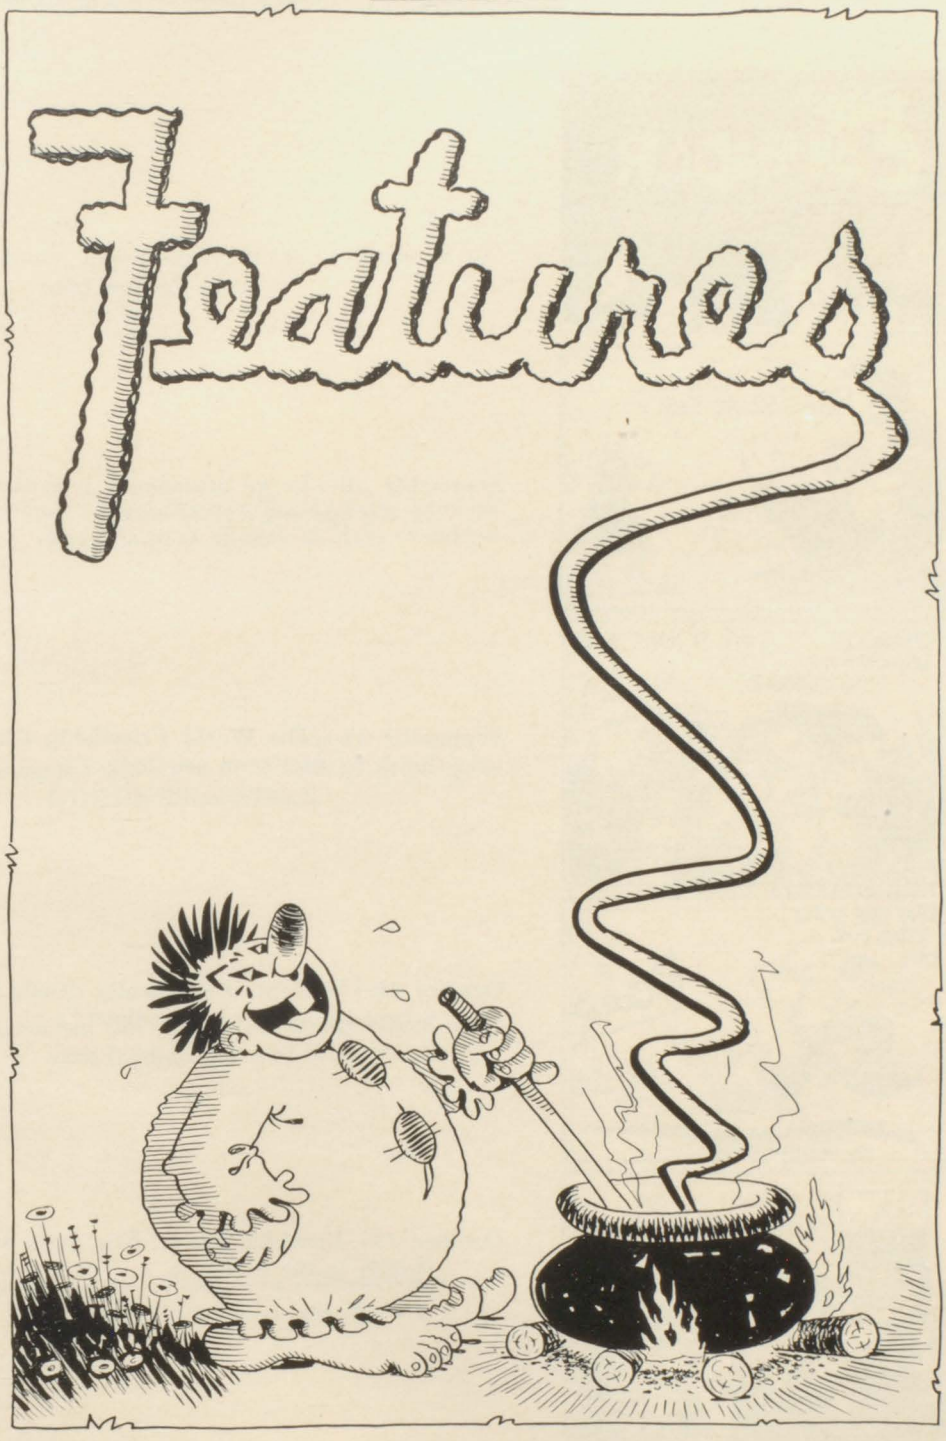

Miss Nofziger, acting as faculty sponsor for the Association, did much to bring it to the fore as an active organization.

The G. A. A. is patterned on the Athladelphian Society. Its purpose is to promote good sportsmanship and interest in athletics among the girls.

The Association sponsors the play-day which is held in all the city high. schools. On this occasion Franklin is always well represented.

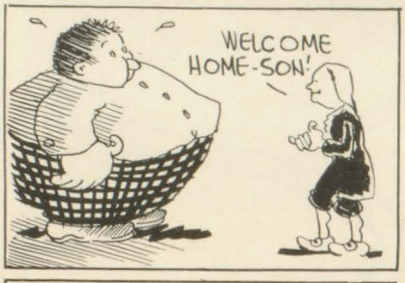

The biggest event of their year is the Annual Circus and Carnival which they stage each spring for the purpose of raising funds to cover the expenses of the year. This year the circus was unusually large and successful. Among the many attractions were characters from the comic strips, animals, freaks, and many side-shows. Mr. Parker presided as ring master and added much to the hilarity of the day. This circus takes the place of the May Day Festival which used to be so popular at this school.
